A certain middle-aged spinster has a vivid memory of Texas courtship.

She was struggling with a hot cup of coffee in a small town railway station, trying to gulp it before the train pulled out. A cowboy, seated a couple of stools away, noted her plight, and, seeing the guard waving to the woman, came to the fore.

"Here, ma'am, you can take my cup o'coffee. It's already sauced and blowed."

A clergyman, walking around his parish, met an old parishioner.
"Well, John," he said, "how is it I have not seen you at church lately?"

"Hain't got no Sunday trousers," answered John.

"Well," said the clergyman, "I have a pair at home that will fit you. I'll have them sent to you."

The trousers were sent, and on the following three Sundays John was seen at church. Then he missed a couple of Sundays, and the clergyman called on him.

"Well, John," he said, "you have had no excuse for not coming to church lately."

"Look here, parson," said John. "I come to church three Sundays, and if you don't think I earned them trousers, just tell me how many more Sundays I shall have before they're mine."

"Well, str," said the landlady gushingly to her new boarder, "I hope you had a good night's sleep."

"I can't say that I have," said the boarder. "In fact, your beastly cat kept me awake most of the night."

"Oh!" said the landlady, getting on her dignity at once. "I suppose you are going to ask me to have the poor thing destroyed?"

"No," replied the boarder calmly enough. "I was only going to suggest that you have him tuned."

RAVINE MURDER MYSTERY

Gruesome Crime Recalled

London, Mar. 2.

Sickening details of the discovery of the mutilated bodies of two women—those of Mrs. Isabella Ruxton and a nursemaid, Mary Rogerson—at Moffat, were given by Mr. Jackson, K.C., at the opening of the trial of Dr. Buck Ruxton at the Manchester Assizes to-day. Ruxton was, however, charged only in respect of the murder of his wife, to which he pleaded "Not Guilty."

Mr. Jackson said the dismemberment of the bodies was done by someone with medical knowledge and surgical skill. He pointed out that the accused was a Bachelor of Medicine and a Bachelor of Science, and suggested that early one Sunday Dr. Ruxton murdered the women on a landing outside a bedroom, dismembered their bodies in a bathroom, removed all identification marks and cut them up and drained them of blood.

Counsel described how portions of the bodies were found, with tell-tale parts cut away. There was straw on the staircase, which was used to pack the bodies found in the ravine.

Mr. Jackson spoke for four hours before a packed Court in which men and women were separated, a special gallery being reserved for women.

Earlier in the proceedings, Mr. Jackson stated that Ruxton came from India, and went to Edinburgh in 1928 to study medicine. His name then was Gabriel Hakim. Later he altered it by deed poll to Buck Ruxton.

Ruxton's wife, Isabella Kerr, aged 34, was manageress of a cafe when Ruxton met her in 1928. She was married to a Dutchman named van Est, but it seemed that they only lived together a few weeks.

Counsel suggested that Ruxton murdered his wife because of foolish jealousy, and the nursemaid, Mary Rogerson, was killed because she caught accused in the act.

Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., is the leading counsel for the accused.

FORTY-HOUR WEEK IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, Mar. 2.
An agreement between the Ministry of Public Works and the workers has been signed, whereby it is agreed that employees should have a forty hour week, instead of forty-seven, and that workers on holiday should be on full pay.

Wages will be the same for married and single men and no difference will be made between Maoris and Europeans.

The Ministry states the agreement is a new thing and it is hoped it will be an example to the world. It does not mean that less work will be done during the shorter working hours agreed upon but that more men will be employed.

FILM STUDIO FIRE

BIG BLAZE AT ELSTREE

Five Acres Laid Waste

Elstree, Feb. 9. About five acres of studio buildings were destroyed by a fire early this morning, which is described as the most destructive, and the most spectacular, that the British film industry has suffered or seen. The buildings, which form one block adjacent to the main road through the village, were occupied in part by the British and Dominions Film Corporation, Limited, and in part by British International Pictures, Limited. On behalf of the latter firm it is officially announced that valuable sound recording equipment was rescued, and that films which were in preparation in the two of their studios that were involved have been transferred to other studios in the main buildings, which escaped damage. Work on them will be continued without interruption to-morrow.

The fire is stated to have originated in one of the three studios of the British and Dominions Corporation, and to have spread with great rapidity. It appears to have been first noticed about 2 a.m. by a fireman in the employ of British International Pictures, whose private brigade assisted that of the British and Dominions Corporation and raised an alarm that brought a dozen or more public fire engines within a few minutes.

FANNED BY BREEZE

In the sharp frosty air, and fanned by a strong and variable breeze, the fire was very soon, in the words of one spectator, "a roaring inferno." The flames mounted to about 100 ft. above the structure, and within the building they spread with amazing speed until they had involved first the whole of the studios of the British and Dominions Corporation and then, bursting through the dividing wall, enveloped the two studios and a recording theatre of the British International Corporation, which were ranged longitudinally alongside those of the other company.

Efforts of the firemen were particularly directed at the outset to saving the British International Studios, but the intensity of the fire drove the men back and these premises were soon involved. Finally, the whole of the five acres became a glowing pile, which illuminated the country for miles around. The mass continued to glow until about 5.30 when the brigades began to assume control of it. During this time an anxious watch was kept on the main building of the British International Corporation, which is separated by a private roadway from the one involved. Water was continuously played on this building, and the officials of the British International Corporation have, since paid a tribute to the manner in which it was saved. One fireman was gassed and another was hurt by falling debris.

For some hours longer the firemen played on the smouldering ruins, and even in the afternoon a few firemen, who were left as a precaution after the others had returned to their stations, found it necessary to deal with an occasional blaze up. Throughout the day a continuous stream of visitors saw the skeleton of the gutted building from the road. They were not permitted near the ruins lest the portions of the sagging, disintegrated roof that somehow still held up should fall.

Inside the ruins one found evidence of the intensity of the fire. Walls were stripped of their asbestos covering; 10 in. girders that once formed parts of the supports of the roof were bent in an incredible way; thinner girders of 2 in. or 3 in. thickness were twisted and bent in various shapes; and glasswork was melted into fantastic forms. Walls bulged, and any moment one expected to see the distorted framework join the debris on the ground.

FILMS SAVED

Mr. Herbert Wilcox, producer for the British and Dominions Corporation, stated that among the things of value the firemen were able to save were films that had just been made there. All film artists, some of whom had been working until 10 o'clock last night, had left when the fire happened. There were about 100 workmen left on the premises, and, in addition to the films, they managed

CHINA'S FINANCIAL STRENGTH

Heavy Industry First Thought

Nanking, Feb. 23. "How could China emerge victorious from a war if she were dragged into one?" was the question raised by Dr. Liu Chen-tung, noted financial expert and dean of studies of the Central Political Institute, at a recent meeting of the Nanking Winter Lecture Club.

After reviewing briefly the history of the World War and the history of the Shanghai hostilities, Dr. Liu said that victory—a full and complete victory—always lies in the side which has the largest financial resources and which can be readily mobilized.

If a war were fought to a finish, he continued, then the end would arrive when the financial strength of one party was exhausted.

DECIDING FACTOR

For aside from military forces, the wealth and its readiness for mobilization constitutes the deciding factor in a war, he pointed out.

In order that China would not submit to the humiliation of surrendering to her foes in the event of an open break, the building-up of her heavy industry should be carried on in full swing, he said. He reminded his audience that, at present, China has to import more than $8,000,000 worth of petroleum annually. With the oil supplies cut out by foreign navies in time of war, the country's fighting units would be helpless, he asserted.

During wartime, every dollar in conjunction with all our resources should be mobilized. But is our financial machinery so constructed that it can meet the extraordinary demand in time of war? Dr. Liu asked.

REORGANIZATION

In this connection, he said that the reorganization of our banking system is of primary importance. He pointed out that more than 80 per cent of our national capital has, up to the present, fallen into the hands of the Shanghai bankers. It is very probable, he predicted, that after the declaration of war, the currency will flow abroad.

Dr. Liu lauded the achievement of the Central Government in its feverish construction of highways. From the military point of view, he said, China should not build too many railways. A railroad may cost millions of dollars to build but a few shells may blow the line into pieces, he remarked.

Dwelling upon the building of highways, the speaker told his audience that China has, during the last five years, built 70,000 li of public roads. Thus, the length of our highways has increased more than five times of that for 1930 and more than fifty times of that for 1885.

THE NECESSITY

To believe that the Chinese people are unpatriotic is to ignore the heroic facts of the past, he proceeded. Frequently, the people realize keenly enough the necessity of contributing their service to the nation.

The question then arises: In what way can a citizen render his, or her, service to the country? In the opinion of Dr. Liu, the best way to achieve this is to form a great, national organization which will cover the whole nation and which will enlist every man, woman and child as its active members.

In this connection, the great success the New Life Movement has gained towards the organization of the people during the last two years, is phenomenal. He concluded that it is only when the Chinese people are strictly trained in accordance with the principles of the movement can they achieve the final victory in any future conflict with their enemy.

Central News Agency.

to save some valuable equipment. Mr. Wilcox said that among the films was one on which he had begun production only last week, "The Three Maxims," on which only one day's shooting had been done. In that film Mr. Leslie Banks, Miss Anna Neagle, and Mr. Tullio Carminati were appearing. A film was also being made for the Paramount Company, and a third, entitled "Love in Exile," in which the players included Mr. Olive Brook and Miss Helen Vinson, was only partially finished. A Gordon Barker picture, which was finished only last night, was saved.

THE GERMAN LABOUR FRONT

(BY PROF. DR. RAUECKER.)

When you speak to people outside Germany about the German Labour (G.L.F.), you realise that they know comparatively little about it. They may have heard of "Strength through Joy" and may remember having seen the holiday ships conveying hundreds and thousands of workers to distant shores for some much needed relaxation. They are surprised to learn that that institution has numerous holiday homes of its own and that the charge made for board and residence there works out at from 12 to 15 rm per week, including the fare for the journey there and back. He learns from the report issued by Dr. Ley, the head of the G.L.F., that more than 1,000,000,000 rm has been circulated so far by "Strength through Joy" during the two years of its existence and that the contributions paid by the G.L.F. will probably become unnecessary after next year although two out of every three of those holiday-makers have an income of less than 150 rm a month. The number of visitors to the sporting events organised by the G.L.F. has gone up from less than 35,000 in 1933/34 to more than 3,000,000 in 1934/35 and continues to rise.

That is about all the outsider knows of the G.L.F., unless he remembers also that organisation is the successor of the former trades unions, these being dissolved in May 1933.

HARD TO APPRECIATE

It is perhaps not quite easy for a non-German reader to properly appreciate the essential features that characterise the G.L.F. He may think it strange that it is considered possible to apply the principle of "the community first, and the individual afterwards" to the economic and social order of a great country and to build on that foundation a gigantic edifice of economic and social enterprise whose various sections, although separated from one another, are yet connected with each other by open doors admitting an ever increasing number of visitors devoted to the principle of collaboration.

It stands to reason that so huge an organisation as the G.L.F. is subdivided into an enormous number of smaller ones. All these, however, are work towards the same ends, which—broadly speaking—are as follows: to agree upon the terms and conditions of work (more especially rates of wages) to make provision against loss of employment, sickness, accident, etc.; to organise the vocational training of the workers, and so on. The connection between them, and the Government is established by the Trustees of Labour appointed in the various economic districts. They are responsible to the Government and are empowered to settle any matters concerning which the parties themselves cannot come to mutual agreement. During the years of transition (1933 and 1934) they had to make frequent use of that power; but as things are getting more consolidated now, it seems that they will gradually develop into more controlling and supervising organs, the ultimate aim before the Government being to give as much scope as possible to economic self-administration and so entrust this function to the G.L.F. In his proclamation of October 24th, 1934, Chancellor Hitler said that "it is the business of the G.L.F. to adjust the rights of all parties concerned in such a manner that the principles of National Socialism are complied with and that the number of disputes that have to be decided by the organs of the Government is reduced to a minimum."

ABSOLUTE EQUALITY

There is no need to enumerate in detail the various subdivisions of the G.L.F., but it is important to emphasise that employers and employees are represented in each on a footing of absolute equality, that the lowest of these organisations are those comprising the workers in one and the same undertaking, that the larger ones are organised partly along vocational and partly along regional lines, and that the highest of them enjoy a competency extending over the whole country, so that they are national and all-comprehensive in their constitution.

It is still too early to pronounce a definite judgment on the activities carried out by all these bodies of economic autonomy, as they are not fully developed yet. The decisive factor, however, is that

HELPING HAND OF COURT

Seamy Side Proves Not So Seamy

Shanghai, Feb. 21. She was a Soochow wife whose husband was sick and her children starving. Help was not forthcoming in the City of Beautiful Women but Shanghai, the wealthy, the prodigal beckoned and offered a way out for even beggars have been known to collect dollars on the streets.

Like Wang Lung in "The Good Earth," she departed for the big city to cast herself on the charity of passers-by and here opens an unreported chapter in the daily investigation of human experience at the First District Court.

A Chinese policeman found her hungry and destitute in the roof garden of one of the Nanking Road department stores. Her dreams of affluence—a few dollars—were shattered and she taken to the District Court.

It is no crime to be destitute. It is a tragedy but the District Court which sits to dispense justice and punish the wrong-doer has to make a decision. The judge decided that she should be sent back to Soochow and ordered that a dollar be given her from the poor box. True, a dollar did not seem much for it barely covered the woman's train fare and left little to help the family. The point was realized but as the judge regretfully remarked, "This is a very poor box."

Assistance came unexpectedly. The court staff and policeman came to her rescue. One Chinese sergeant contributed forty cents, another twenty, a constable ten cents, a foreign inspector sixty cents, a sixth went to the extent of two dollars. The result was the woman left the court, with a police escort to the train at the North Station, with seven dollars in her possession and happiness shining in her eyes.

RICKSHAW RENTAL TO BE CUT

Reduction To 77 Cents Per Day Authorized

Shanghai, Feb. 21.

The Shanghai Municipal Council on Wednesday endorsed a recommendation of the Rickshaw Special Committee that with effect from April 1 the authorized rental charge for public rickshaws be reduced to 77 cents per day (including the pullers' contribution of 7 cents per day to the Pullers' Mutual Aid Association) a reduction of 8 cents per day.

The recommended reduction in the rental charge was submitted to the Council by the Special Committee after exhaustive inquiry had been made into the estimated profits of rickshaw owners and actual conditions of the industry and also after detailed consideration of departmental reports upon these subjects. Full information was obtained from various sources regarding the outlay and recurring expenses of rickshaw owners and the Committee was satisfied, before submitting its recommendation to the Council, with the substantial accuracy of these figures.

They are all animated by a determination to give substance to that autonomy and that they realise their great responsibilities towards the community, i.e., the nation. The whole system as now set up clearly proves that it is wrong to speak of the Third Reich as though it were ruled in conformity with the ideas of a dictatorship and as though its "leaders" in the economic domain were practically dictators.

The social activities of the G.L.F. cover a very wide range. Last year, some 100,000,000 rm was paid to its members in connection with unemployment, disablement, sickness, death, etc., and not less than 2,840,000 members consulted the bureau for advice on legal matters. About 720,000 disputes of an economic kind came before the competent organs of the G.L.F., and 90% of these were settled amicably, thus proving that the German people have no desire to embark again upon the disastrous policy of class war.

The membership fees charged by the G.L.F. are very small. At first, the average amount payable per month was 3.80 rm each member, but that amount has now been reduced to 1.52 rm.

HOUSE RENT DISPUTE

Regulations Adopted By Yuan

Shanghai, Feb. 21.

A series of important regulations for the settlement of house rent disputes without bringing the matter to law courts were adopted by the Executive Yuan at a meeting on February 18. The main articles of the regulations are:

That, unless mediation fails after applying the following regulations, the matter shall not be brought to a law court.

That a standard house rent shall be fixed by the local government authorities according to local conditions. The highest standard house rent shall not be more than twelve per cent of the yearly premium derived from the total value of land and buildings thereon.

That, when a dispute arises, at the request of either party the local government authorities shall convene meetings of the mediation committee to bring about a settlement of the dispute within one week.

That the mediation committee shall be composed of representatives from the local government office, local Kuomintang office, local district court, and parties to the dispute.

That parties to the dispute shall nominate their delegates within one week after receiving a notice.

That, during the period of mediation, the landlords shall not force their tenants to vacate the premises occupied by them.

That, when mediation is brought to a successful conclusion, a written statement shall be made out, signed by the parties to the dispute, and reported to the government office.

That this written statement shall be regarded as a contract between the parties to the dispute.

That, when mediation fails, due to the disagreement of either one party or both parties, and the dispute has been referred to a law court, all documents connected with the unsuccessful mediation shall be sent to the court concerned.

That, after a dispute has been settled, through mediation, either party which has failed to observe, or carry out, the agreement entered into in this regard, is liable to a fine, amounting to twice as much as the monthly rent for which dispute they have come for mediation. Landlords who force tenants to vacate premises during the period of mediation are liable to a similar fine. The local government office will ask the law court to execute the decision.

That no charges shall be made for the mediation of house rent disputes.

That house rent disputes, which have not been settled when the regulations are promulgated, shall be settled according to the provisions of the regulations.

MANAGING THE CURRENCY

An Opportune Talk At The Rotary Club

A SUBJECT WELL TREATED

A subject which is uppermost in our minds and is of transcendent importance was truly and well expounded yesterday at the Weekly Tiffin of the Rotary Club held at the Roof Garden of the Hong Kong Hotel, when Rotarian C. Champkin spoke on "Managing The Currency."

The speaker treated the subject from almost every angle so far as the currency was concerned in the matter for trading and other functions. "All sorts of principles are being shelved—the law of supply and demand—Gresham's Law—the law of diminishing returns and of the velocity of circulation," so said Rotarian Champkin in his opening address.

"A managed currency in Hong Kong will not bring us back the trade we have lost through tariff barriers and subsidised competition, but it will help tremendously the trade we still have by its stabilising effects on the dollar," opined Rotarian Champkin when speaking about the effect of a managed currency in Hong Kong.

Rotarian Champkin's address was as interesting as it was witty, coming as it did at an opportune moment the speaker was heartily applauded for his talk at the close.

ECONOMIC PROBLEMS SURVEYED

The gathering was presided over by Professor Forster who in introducing the speaker said that Rotarian Champkin very kindly consented to speak to them at very short notice. The speaker, Professor Forster said was eminently suited for the task and he was sure those who were about to hear the talk will have no misgivings as to its essence.

THE ADDRESS

Addressing the gathering Mr. Champkin said:

I have too much respect for this Club to feel at all easy in my mind about giving an address that I have had insufficient time to prepare. On the other hand I have a great respect for our worthy President and fully appreciate his difficulty when the programme of our activities is interrupted and it becomes necessary for him to call upon somebody at short notice to speak on a subject that nobody understands. It is only because of that respect that I stand here, not exactly under protest, but with a feeling that I would rather be listening than talking—a sensation that I confess is rather unusual for me. (Laughter)

Managed currencies are prominent in our minds at the moment and I have undertaken to talk on this subject because, first, it is opportune, secondly, because it is of transcendent importance, and thirdly, because it is, I think, very desirable that we should survey economic problems from standpoints remote from conventional attitudes. We are living in times when even the most dependable platitudes concerned with economics are open to question. All sorts of principles are being shelved—the law of supply and demand—Gresham's Law—the law of diminishing returns and of the velocity of circulation. We are learning something new about rent and interest and wages—what is capital and what monopoly—what the three factors in production are and what new laws govern the distribution of wealth among monopoly, capital and labour. While we have to keep in mind that the greatest enemy to economic freedom is enslavement to convention, we have also to consider that there are primary laws that govern all currency systems, and that a nation that evades or abrogates those fundamental laws and surrenders to destructive ideas will, sooner or later, tread the path that leads to economic prostration. While, therefore, we should cultivate a bold independence of thought on currency matters, it is equally important that we should realise that the premature adoption of dubious ideas based on theories that are sound in certain circumstances may lead to disaster under unforeseen conditions of working reality. It is this academic lack of contact with reality that is, I believe, responsible for many of the economic ills from which the nations of the world are suffering to-day.

MANAGEMENT OF CURRENCY

If I followed the customary procedure in an address of this kind I should make clear at the outset the idea underlying state management of currency. One might suppose its simple matter to explain, but it develops complexities when considered in detail. It is, in fact, better stated as an inspiration than an idea, Confucius said: "Begin by defining terms and making them exact." It is perhaps unfortunate that those responsible for currency policies nowadays have no more in common with Confucius, but they certainly have clearly defined, exact and uniformly unifying ideas about almost everything concerned with money. (Laughter) They do not all agree in their generalizations, but if their ideas take widely differing form, they are at least in agreement on one particular—that although politics and economics are now one and the same, there is no very good reason why the public should know it. In fact, so far as the public is concerned, it would appear that what they think we need most urgently in these difficult times is not more knowledge about things that we don't understand, but more ignorance about things that they think it doesn't do us any good to understand. (Laughter) I suppose they know best, though it seems a pity they don't know any better!

I came across a very sage reflection the other day in Boswell's Life of Johnson. "Sir," said Doctor Johnson, "why should stealing be thought a crime? When we consider by what unjust methods silver is acquired, where is the harm in one man taking the silver of another? Besides, sir, when we consider the bad use that many people make of their silver, and how much better use the thief may make of it, why then, sir, stealing may be defended as a very allowable practice?"

We may, I think, reasonably infer from these sentiments that Doctor Johnson was born several generations too soon for his economic expertise to be properly appreciated. (Laughter) I have substituted the word "silver" for Doctor Johnson's word "property" and for this trifling liberty I prefer to the shade of the eminent lexicographer such apologies as may be called for appropriate to the times and satisfactory to the Government of China.

PERVERSE IDEA PREVAILS

Now, "when we consider" as Doctor Johnson would say, the number of people in Hong Kong that don't read the Government Gazette it is not very surprising that many crude and perverse ideas prevail as to the import of recent official changes in our currency. Yet these changes should interest us appreciably, because every ill that afflicts this Colony—from economic ruin to moral perfection—is popularly supposed to be deep-rooted in some defect in the currency of China. Though we, in Hong Kong, profess virtuous aims we are the last to admit that we deserve to succeed in our profession, (Laughter) but if, nevertheless, appropriate that we should seek some explanation of the causes that are disturbing those exacting principles that govern the conduct of other people's affairs.

We are able to do so quite dispassionately. We have recited the Litany of penury so long and have suffered economic ruin so often that a little thing like a managed currency is not likely to hurt us. We may even learn in time to endure our moral perfection with a guarded sense of civic satisfaction, for morality, after all, is only a study in conflicting emotions. (Laughter) At any rate we are not dismayed when our currency experts, in circumstances of the most cheerful licentiousness, confiscate our silver at forty per cent. below its value and give us paper in return. We are quite unmoved when they tell us, with expectations that surpass all laws of logic, that henceforth China will conform to the principles of what is euphoniously termed a managed currency.

WHAT IS MANAGED CURRENCY

What exactly is meant by the term "managed currency?" To what extent can this euphemism be correlated to the impulses of common sense and common honesty? To these two questions there are two easy answers—and both of them are wrong! (Laughter) Let us admit that a managed currency backed by the aberrations of government policy is better than a mismanaged currency backed by goal. Then we have to concede that every nation on a managed currency must establish its prestige through its Ministry of Finance. We have to admit the gigantic fallacy that the state can manage the currency more effectively than the Bank—a delusion that is misleading bankrupt States to-day into the error of supposing they can prop their tottering economic regimes by waving a wand over their currencies. It is easy to be misled by the fact that bankrupt countries are apparently prosperous. It takes them a long time, under the system of managed currencies, to discover how rich they never were (Laughter).

Mr. Hoover, formerly President of the United States, said recently: "This is a time for plain speaking and blunt statement of some fundamental principles. Managed Currencies are potent devices for destroying confidence. Through politically managed credit they lead to devastating inflation. Politics are bound to be in every government-managed currency. The dollar will never ring true on the counters of the world, nor on the counters of the banks so long as there is the alloy of politics in it."

Now, let us see to what extent Mr. Hoover is justified in his mistrust of the politically-minded economists of his country. Here is an example of their banking operations. By the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 the Government arbitrarily took over all the gold of the Banks, giving them certificates in exchange that represented theoretically an equivalent amount of gold. The next day the dollar was devalued by more than forty per cent. In twenty-four hours the government made, at the expense of the banks, a profit—if you like to put it that way—of two thousand million dollars. One day the banks had gold. The next day they had paper, that on its face gave them a call for less than sixty per cent. of the gold they had the day before, and they couldn't even get that, and they couldn't get it to-day. The profit on this stroke-of-the-pen operation was taken into the resources of the Treasury to help in balancing the budget. I think it was Voltaire who said that government is a device for taking money out of one person's pocket and putting it into another's! (Laughter)

SOMETHING SIMILAR

Something very similar to this has happened in China. What can honest bankers think of this currency jugglery?—not that it matters much what they think because if bank managers were honest, and really thought all they meant, our lives would be a series of continued calamities!
(Loud laughter).

Stripped of the cloak of a respectable phrase, a managed currency stands revealed as a kind of lowest common denominator of expert sharp practice. From whatever angle you regard it there seems to be something fishy about it. It achieves too much to be entirely respectable. It enables you to lift yourself by your boot-laces. (Laughter) Coupled with its confederate, inflation, it cheerfully lengthens your cloth by shortening your yardstick. Governments balance budgets by its means, yet if you attempt to endow an orphan asylum by the same means you find yourself in gaol. (Loud laughter).

In most countries on managed currencies it is an offence in law
for any person to possess gold.
Now, if in this way Governments
concede the obvious conclusion
that paper is not as good as gold and at the same time enact that any man with sense enough to appreciate the same great truth must go to gaol, then those Governments are putting the brake of a gold sentence on the inexorable of Gresham's Law.

Modern times have not produced a more sinister affinity than this between a managed currency and inflation. The French—who have occasional flashes of wit—have a saying "La presse a papier conduit a la guillotine"—Pardon my Southern accent! (Laughter) It means, in real language "After the printing-press comes the guillotine"—a sardonic reference to the fact that immoderate inflation leads to civil revolution. The Government of China has very wisely placed the management of its currency with a department of Chinese banks that command the confidence of every financial centre of the world, but the whole hierarchy of government departments will not prevent inflation if political expediency demands it.
Advocates of managed currencies and consequent inflation always want more of one of these vices
only when they have had enough of both. To inflationists, to think is to act. The trouble is that they continue to act long after they have ceased to think. (Laughter).
Inflation is all right so long as it continues, but it produces a crisis
when it stops. If it goes beyond the point at which it should stop
it leads inevitably to a limitless rise in prices, and it comes to a chaotic and when prices rise so rapidly that money ceases to be an effective means of payment. I once asked a leading London banker what advantage Holland
had by sticking to the gold standard. He replied that they were preferred creditors in the world's bankruptcy. They knew now that they wouldn't get anything,
whereas countries on managed currencies wouldn't know it till they themselves crashed in to ruin
—that was where the preference
came in. (Laughter).

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

Until China succumbed to the lure of what psychologists call wealth consciousness, and what plain people call getting something for nothing, her currency
stood four-square to all the world
as based honestly and unreservedly on a solid backing of silver.
China, almost alone among the nations, had never defaulted on her currency. The best that can be said of present conditions is well stated in the simple terms of an eminent authority on currency
—an economist of international reputation—"They have not" he said, "deduced fundamental principles from essential facts, either by a sound empiricism or a solid economic-psychological analysis.
These measures are founded only on a formal dialectic. There is a residue of phenomena not capable of being subsumed under this generalization. The whole scheme is irrelevant to the main corpus of economic theory as applied to a consideration of the catastrophic cyclical crises accidental to reformed and stabilised capitalism."

This states the case for or against managed currencies with admirable fairness and restraint.
I haven't the least idea what it means, but I don't think you should doubt it merely on that account. (Laughter) The more apparent it seems the more seemly it appears, and the same may be said of most of the astonishing incredulities loosely classified as expert opinion on the currency of this country.

The unfortunate thing about currency experts is that they try to do too much—and do it! If our minds had not ceased consciously to function in face of the incredible happenings about us
we might make some attempt to follow these academic abstractions. As it is, we cannot altogether detach from our bewilderment a sort of unholy admiration
for those whose ideas are so edifying, but so lacking in conviction—those who sincerely believe that economic self-sufficiency can be realised within a framework
of national instability.

NOT AS BAD

You may possibly have gathered an impression that I don't like managed currencies. (Laughter)
Some managed currencies, it is true, are not as bad as others,
though even the few that are almost good are a great deal worse
than those that understand themselves; but in my generalization
I except our system in Hong Kong.
We are peculiarly fortunate in our conditions. Our currency can give rise to no possible anxiety. It is well controlled and well centred.
It is easily expanded or contracted as needs arise. Our notes are as amply secured on their present basis as they were when backed by silver reserves. Our government is firmly established. We balance our budget with regularity and therefore immoderate inflation is unthinkable and political control of credit is out of question. The worst we can say of our system is that if the fact that China nationalized silver doesn't speak well for her morals the fact that we followed her example doesn't speak any better for ours; but we were driven to this course. Our currency is irrevocably linked to the currency of China. Like Agas, we walk lightly by her side, and if we have perforce to stray from grace
we can console ourselves with the reflection that only by being a little bad can we fully appreciate the value of those moral principles
we adopt when we decide to be a little worse. (Loud laughter) Even the strictly moral currency that formerly we had was under some suspicion of being a little more than it pretended not to be!
(Laughter).

A MANAGED CURRENCY IN HONG KONG

A managed currency in Hong Kong will not bring us back the trade we have lost through tariff barriers and subsidised competition, but it will help tremendously
the trade we still have by its stabilising effect on the dollar. It should stimulate enterprise and foster new connections abroad. It should enhance our credit and restore confidence in the machinery of our commerce. Unstable monetary conditions are a menace to trade, but a greater menace is an unstable government. "The problems that face China are being tackled with courage and resource
by her able ministers, but China
is a country of endless variation.
It can be standardized only from within. It seems to me that this attempt to stabilize currency by transferring tangible wealth for the establishment of credit abroad
will be ineffective so far as is concerned the rehabilitation of the nation's trade. What is most needed is confidence in the administration of internal affairs.
The recent loan of $400,000,000 at six per cent., primarily to balance
the budget, is not reassuring.
There is only one sound way of balancing a budget and that is to reduce expenditure by economy
and to increase revenue by taxation. When a government borrows money to balance its budget it in-flates the currency. The process is automatic and inevitable, and, as I see it, it is of primary importance that, at a time when this great currency experiment is on trial,
inflation should be avoided at all cost. There are many examples of the evil consequences of easy borrowing. Loans for budget purposes lead to loans to repay loans,
and the next step is loans to pay interest on outstanding loans.
Then it is that the inherent danger of a currency system dominated by political considerations becomes obvious to the understanding of its most enthusiastic advocates. Then it is that negative impulses come into play—the fear of failure rather than the determination to overcome—the easy path of inflation rather than the hard way of retrenchment and taxation. Of all expedients that have ever been employed to balance budgets this device of a managed currency is the least satisfactory and the most certain to defeat its purpose. It may be that the times are such that all nations need a dash of immorality

to round out their fiscal policies.
Ideological unscrupulousness in nearly all nations, the ideals and practices of sound banking and currency that are based on the fundamental need for a metallic standard. Certain it is that if we want security for our dollar that was not only good yesterday but is good to-day and will be good for ever hereafter, we can find that security in gold, and in gold alone.
Failing that I think we should have held on to our silver. There was no need to nationalise silver.
The essentials to a sound scheme
of currency reform are a strong and united government with some guarantee of continuity in policy, internal security for trade, a balanced budget without resort to the inflation inevitable to local borrowing, and honest administration of fiscal affairs. Stabilization of the dollar would better have been achieved by a foreign loan, preferably in the United States, with an agreement modifying the American silver policy in such manner as to make it possible to retain
in this country the metallic backing for China's currency that is essential for its security and for the safeguarding of the national credit.

AMERICA UNFAIRLY BLAMED

In some quarters America is rather unfairly blamed for the chaos that exists in national currencies formerly based on gold.
The fact that the note circulation
of the United States is not more than about fifty per cent. of her gold reserves is a deplorable state of affairs, but it is absurd to blame America because gold is flowing into the country instead of goods.
No greater misfortune can befall a nation than the piling up of unwanted gold. The United States Government is only acting in accordance with the soundest principles in turning a deaf ear to the blandishments of those that advocate currency inflation as a means of raising prices and relieving unemployment. The American silver-buying policy, however, is much more difficult to understand.
In view of the nation's huge surplus of gold. To us, it seems simply incredible that the United States should bid up the price
of foreign silver by fifty per cent.
and then proceed to buy all the silver in sight at enormous profits
to the sellers—that a nation
labouring under the disability of a hundred per cent. surplus of gold should seriously announce to the world its intention to buy 1,250 million dollars worth of silver for which it can have no earthly use
and that cannot possibly be sold back except at a mere fraction of its recorded value in the United States Treasury. We must assume that this puzzling policy had an object, but it seems clear enough
now that whatever that object was
it has failed lamentably and is largely, if not entirely, responsible for the unfortunate position that China finds herself in to-day.

The present government, with the co-operation of Chinese banks,
has successfully upheld its fiscal policy for the past few months.
Notwithstanding the present imperfections and potential dangers of a system hurriedly conceived and boldly put into practice, it must be the earnest wish of every friend of China that the gloomy prophecies of old conservatives like myself may be falsified, and that China may yet confound her critics and progress from strength to strength in defiance of every conventional conception of currency and every accepted tradition of economy. (Loud applause).

VOTE OF THANKS

Professor Robertson in rising to propose a vote of thanks for Mr.
Champlin's able address, said that he disagreed with the speaker's views. The Latin saying "Nihil telligit quod non ornabit" (He touches nothing that he does not adorn) aptly applied to Mr. Champlin (laughter). It was difficult for any country to go back on currency, based on either gold or silver, as it was impossible to know what the metal would do. He felt that the speaker's talk called for a lengthy reply, and suggested that a fellow Rotarian should do so in the near future, before the memory of Mr. Champlin's splendid address was forgotten.

BRITAIN AND EGYPT

Negotiations For New Treaty

London, Mar. 2/

The preliminary conversations in connection with the negotiations for the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty were formally opened in Cairo to-day. For Britain they are being conducted by Sir Miles Lampson, High Commissioner with the assistance, among others, of officers of Royal Navy, Army and the Royal Air Force as expert advisers.

The Leader of Egyptian delegation, a Nubian Pasha, who in his opening speech expressed hope that the occasion would result in a final settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian relations, on a basis which would recognise Egypt's independence, but at same time
would safeguard the British interest, thus enabling the two countries to contribute to the maintenance of peace.

Sir Miles Lampson said this was the opinion of the British Government, as it was their ardent hope that by the exercise of patience and understanding, and by a display of goodwill on both sides it would be possible to reach an agreement that would satisfy individual and joint interests and the aims of the two countries.

With a view to removing at outset any obstacles to an agreement,
which had been experienced in past, it had been decided that as a preliminary to the negotiations for a Treaty settlement, there should be a confidential discussion
in the spirit of potential allies,
of the matters which had caused
most of the difficulty in the 1930 negotiations.

The British Government, he added looked forward to the time
when as result of the Treaty freely entered into by both parties, a new era would be established in the relations of two countries—an era when Egypt having assumed her complete sovereignty, and the grounds for past misunderstandings
having been removed, they would appeal to the world as allies and equals.

EDEN MEETS GERMAN DELEGATE

London, Mar. 2.

Before his departure for Geneva, the Foreign Secretary, Mr.
Anthony Eden received Prince Bismark of the German Embassy,
at the Foreign Office.

The purpose of the visit was to convey to Mr. Eden, the reply of the German Government to the proposal made to the German ambassador on January 26, that Germany should negotiate a bilateral naval agreement with this country, embodying the results of any agreement reached at the Naval Conference.

Prince Bismark intimated that his government were in principle ready to start negotiations for such a bilateral treaty.

MEDITERRANEAN WATCH EXPENDITURE

London, Mar. 2.

It was announced in the House of Commons that the monthly cost of the continuance of the special naval, military and air precautions
in the Mediterranean, on the present scale was estimated to be about $500,000.

Mr. Morrison who replied for the Chancellor of Exchequer, when asked whether better use could not be made of this money, replied,
"No, Sir."

The blending of tender romance with stark drama permeates the youthful love, with its dreams and hopes, its heartaches and joys and its human appeal in "Freckles," the picturization of Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel, showing to-day at the King's Theatre.

A splendid cast of youthful actors whose talents merit stardom is entrusted with the leading roles in "Freckles." In the title role is Tom Brown, clever young actor who scored in "Anne of Green Gables." Carol Stone, a beautiful ingenue, has the role of school-mistress Mary Arden. Virginia Weidler, of "Laddie," fame, plays the role of Laurie Lou, the tot who always says the wrong thing

ONE EXCITING ADVENTURE

At The Queen's

"One Exciting Adventure" the new Universal production starring Binnie Barnes, with Neil Hamilton and Paul Cavanaugh with a supporting cast of exceptional strength, closes to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

The story is one of the most engaging to reach the screen this season. It has to do with a girl known as the most fascinating woman in Europe who has no trouble in resisting men but whose fingers itch every time she hears of a glittering diamond.

Neil Hamilton is the man whom Binnie wants and Paul Cavanaugh is the man who wants Binnie. The three romp through some of the most thrilling adventures conceivable.

Much of the humour is contributed by Grant Mitchell and Eugene Paulette, who enact the roles of the world's worst detectives. Constantly confronted with clues which would bring them fabulous rewards as they chase Binnie and Paul over half of Europe, they bungle everyone until they stumble, at the surprise ending of the picture, upon a famous crook.

Those in supporting roles include Ferdinand Gottschalk, Henry Kolker, Doris Lloyd, Edna Searl, Jason Roberts, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Dorothy Christy, Edward McWade, Phyllis Brooks and a number of others.

at the right time and furthers the cause of Cupid.

The familiar story concerns Freckles' efforts to overcome almost insuperable obstacles in his search for happiness. He wends his way to the Lumberland country of Indiana, and gets work as a timber guard through Mary's and Laurie Lou's efforts. His romance with Mary intermingles with pulse-quickenings thrills. His rescue of Laurie Lou from a forest giant hurdling to the ground is said to offer a sensation rarely yielded by the screen; and his fist fights with lumber thieves form a gasp-provoking climax.

MILLIONS IN THE AIR

William Tummel, veteran assistant director widely known for his prophecies concerning newcomers to the films, has a new enthusiasm. She is Eleanor Whitney, 18-year-old dancer discovered and developed by Bill Robinson and featured in Paramount's "Millions in the Air," opening to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre.

Tummel has supervised innumerable tests for players who were later to become top-ranking stars. He won the Academy award for his work in "Cavalcade," and is an author, editor, director and title-writer.

Tummel believes also, that Hollywood has never been more on the alert for youthful talent, especially for youngsters who can sing and dance as well as act. "Millions in the Air" has Wendy Barrie and John Howard in the leading roles, with Willie Howard as featured comedian. A radio amateur hour furnishes background for the story and Miss Whitney will be seen dancing as one of the competitors before the microphone.

"BLOSSOM TIME"

The immortal music of the great composer Franz Schubert, the glorious singing of the world's greatest tenor, Richard Tauber, breath-taking and beautiful spectacles, and a beautiful and tender love story of old Vienna are combined in the sensationally acclaimed B.I.P. musical production "Blossom Time" which is showing at the Star Theatre.

A galaxy of British notables support Tauber in the musical, chief among whom are lovely Cane Baxter and Carl Esmond who furnish the story's romantic interest. Athene Seyler, Paul Graetz, Edward Chapman, Gibb McLaughlin and scores of others as well.

The plot has to do with Schubert's love for the dancing master's daughter, his disappointment

Richard Tauber, Athene Seyler and Carl Esmond in a scene from the British International Picture "BLOSSOM TIME," showing at the Star Theatre to-day.

BEHIND THE SCREEN IN HOLLYWOOD

Charles Laughton, Merle Oberon and Robert Donat are members of what Hollywood calls the "Shuttle Club." That is, they are part of that increasing group of actors and actresses who shuttle back and forth between the studios of London and Hollywood—so great is the demand for their services.

For example, Merle Oberon, who is under contract to Alexander Korda, for whom she made pictures in London, has completed several in Hollywood, including Samuel Goldwyn's "The Dark Angel," and will probably return to London after she finishes Goldwyn's "These Three" in which she is starred with Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea.

Laughton was at its lowest ebb when I entered hurriedly and sat down on a plate of sandwiches which was inadvertently placed on a chair. It was a sticky mess to be sure—but everybody laughed, and that broke the ice."

An here's some interesting data about another English actor—that very popular youngster, Freddie Bartholomew, who will play the title role in David O. Selznick's production of the classic story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," assisted by an impressive cast which includes Dolores Costello Barrymore.

Soon after Selznick first announced his intention of making this film, letters from film fans

Eddie Cantor and the Goldwyn Girls in "Strike Me Pink," a Samuel Goldwyn production, released through United Artists.

Charles Laughton made several films in Hollywood, went to London and made "The Private Life of Henry VIII" for Korda's London Films company, returned to Hollywood for more appearances, including that of the indomitable Javert in "Les Miserables," and has returned to London, where he is now at work on the classic dimensions of "Cyrano" for Korda under the direction of Rene Clair.

Robert Donat journeyed from London, where he made a hit in "Henry VIII," to Hollywood, where he gained great praise for his work as the star of "The Count of Monte Cristo." Then back to London where he recently completed Alexander Korda's "The Ghost Goes West," which opened brilliantly at the Leicester square Theatre before the Queen of England and other members of Royalty and the diplomatic corps.

It was on his last eastward journey that this member of the "Shuttle Club" encountered an embarrassing situation which he does not hesitate to tell on himself, he said to his credit as a "regular fellow."

"Whenever I see a sandwich," says Donat, "I am reminded of this unfortunate experience on the Berengaria. Some one gave a frightfully formal party, and con-and how he sacrifices himself to bring her happiness with another. Lavish sets and picturesque backgrounds enhance the action, while the entire film is correctly costumed.

began to pour into his office in Hollywood about the matter. It seemed that many persons objected to seeing their beloved Freddie in the curia and the velvet suits so long identified with the character of the little Lord. Other letter-writers felt differently about the matter.

Selznick decided to put it up to the public. He announced that Lord Fauntleroy would appear on the screen exactly as the consensus directed. That was several weeks ago; now the final decision in the matter has been made after a careful analysis of hundreds of resulant letters.

Freddie Bartholomew, as Lord Fauntleroy, will not wear flaxen curls. He will not wear the accoutrements of what has generally come to be known as a "sissy." He will be a "he-man" in miniature.

Hugh Walpole, famous British novelist who is responsible for the screen-adaptation of the Frances Hodgson Burnett story, is in full agreement with the results of the poll.

"The most interesting thing about working on 'Fauntleroy,'" he states, "was to find what a real sort of person he was. Not having read the book since I was a child, I still had some of the same feeling about him that so many people have—that he was something of a sissy. When I read the book again this year I discovered that it was only the fancy pictures of him that gave that impression. Actually he was a normal and very manly little fellow. In fact, I believe the role could be played in overalls without destroying the mood established by its creator."

Walpole admits that as a youngster he was forced to wear the velvets and laces of the original Fauntleroy!

$13,000 FOR CARL BRISSEN

Released at his own request from his film contract, Carl Brisson's next appearance may be on the New York stage, reports Reuter from Hollywood.

Following a disagreement with his studio about his next film story, Mr. Brisson asked that his contract be terminated. In the settlement he was given a cheque for $13,000.

He told reporters that he hoped to appear in New York in a new operetta, "Forbidden Melody."

ARMED ROBBERY
RECALLEDMan Charged At
The SessionsTsang Kan alias Tsang Ting appeared before Mr. Justice J. J.
Hayden at the Criminal Sessions yesterday on a charge of armed robbery. The offence took place in Kowloon City on December 15
last, in the early hours of the morning.Defendant was charged with having, with others not in custody, committed an armed robbery
at No. 12 Cowshed, Diamond Hill, Kowloon City, on December 15
last, and stealing jewellery and clothing to the total value of $96.50, belonging to Wong Yuk, alias Wong Po, a woman.Mr. E. H. Williams, Assistant Attorney General, instructed by Mr. J. B. Prentis, Assistant Crown
Solicitor, prosecuted, while Mr.
George She, instructed by Mr.
Peter H. Sin, appeared on behalf of the defendant.The jury comprised Messrs. H.
Grays (foreman), E. M. Ozorio, Chang Sam-chong, Edgar de Chaf-
foy, Chen Kin-chor, G. A. Smith and Yu Fook-chin.Stating the case for the Crown, Mr. Williams said that the complainant, a woman named Wong Yuk alias Wong Po and her son,
Lau Yuen Fat, kept a dairy at No.
12 cowshed, Diamond Hill. An old man lived with them and stayed in a cockloft with two young foks.
They had all retired on December 14 at 9 p.m. and about 2 a.m.
the old woman woke the two foks
up to go out and attend to the cows as was the custom. Upon opening the front door for them to go out six men, who had apparently been waiting for them,
walked in and forced them to return to the kitchen. The three young men were bound and made to face the wall and while one of them kept guard over these, the rest of the robbers went into the complainant's cubicle and demanded her keys.The robbers forced open a box
and took away with them articles valued at $96.50, none of which were recovered.On January 14 a Chinese Detective at Bay View Police Station
acting upon information received went to Electric Street and there arrested the accused. The defendant had made a preliminary statement to the Police and at the Kowloon Magistracy had stated that he had been struck with truncheons and had been compelled to make the said statement,
which he alleged was false.Evidence was then given Mr.
G. S. Wilson, A.S.P., Kowloon, regarding the identification parade
held after the accused was arrested. He stated that none of the victims could identify the man.The complainant then went into the box and gave her evidence corroborating the Crown's case.
She was subjected to cross-examination by Mr. George She on the matter of the lighting of the house.The evidence of the Police was then given, Inspector Chester Woods giving evidence of the call and the subsequent arrest of the defendant.After further evidence by the Police, the case was adjourned.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Man Bound Over

Appearing before Mr. S. F. Balfour at the Central Magistracy yesterday on a charge of attempted suicide, Leung Sui Lum, a 28-year-old unemployed who admitted the charge was bound over in a personal bond of $100 for one year. He was also ordered to be sent away.Prosecuting, Detective Sergeant
P. O. Guild stated that accused was sent to hospital on Saturday night suffering from an overdose of opium. He was discharged yesterday. Six months ago, he an-tempted to end his life; he cut his throat and slashed his body. The man had been sent to the S.C.A.
who recommended that he be bound over. The police asked that the man be sent out of the Colony. He had been unemployed for the past year and apparently attempted suicide because of this.Sergeant Guild added that he thought there was nothing the matter with the accused mentally.
He had a wife and a child and the family were prepared to leave Hong Kong last night.

without muzzle or lead. Defendant produced a licence for the dog which was dated February 1, and the first summons was accordingly withdrawn. She admitted the second summons and a fine of $25
was imposed.

CHICKENS' THIEF JAILED

Appearing on remand before Mr.
W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy yesterday, on two charges of theft of seven chickens and two ducks, the property of Mrs. I. Mac-Robert, from No. 3 Shouson Hill, and three iron steps from a manhole, on the hillside at Wong Chuk Hang, the property of the P.W.D., Chan Kwan, alias Tau Pei-fuk, unemployed, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour on each charge,
the sentences to be consecutive.
Defendant this morning admitted a previous conviction for which he had been bound over in $25. The bond had, however, expired.

UNMUZZLED

At the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, J. H. Gibbon, of No. 47 Peking Road, was summoned for allowing his Alsatian dog abroad
in Chatham Road on February 13 without a muzzle or lead and was fined $17. Defendant pleaded guilty and stated that the dog had been inoculated.

BEGGAR AND BANISHEE

Chu Pak-shui, 36, unemployed, pleaded guilty before Mr. Balfour at the Central Magistracy yesterday to charges of begging at Queen's Road Central and returning from banishment. He was sentenced to six months' hard labour on the latter charge and two weeks for begging. Sub-Inspector J. J. Walsh prosecuted.

case, he came to the conclusion that a fight took place which was caused by the grievance of complainant whose sister was a waitress in a tea-shop. Complainant was alleged to be the aggressor and the prosecution agreed to be bound over with the defendants.
This was confirmed by Sergt. Baldwin.It was mentioned that minor bruises and cuts were received by complainant as well as by the defendants.His Worship bound all parties

PRISONER'S
DEATH PROBEDDeath By Natural Causes"Death from natural causes" was the verdict returned by a jury yesterday at the Central Magistracy
when they were empanelled for an inquest into the death of a male prisoner Pun Hon (69), who died at the Victoria Gaol at 11.52 p.m. on Monday. Sitting as coroner was
Mr. S. F. Balfour.Giving medical evidence Dr. G.
Ingram Shaw, prison medical officer said that he first saw the prisoner on July 23 last year. "He was then marked 'half labour,'
i.e. unfit for any work at all. His condition was fair and he was suffering from myocarditis. He had a long series in and out of hospital and on February 5 this year he was again admitted to hospital, his condition having become very bad. The cause of death, in Dr. Shaw's opinion, was (1) acute myocarditis (2) chronic tuberculosis.Acting Assistant Chief Warder A.

it was revealed that the defen-

alleged to have participated in a friendly game of Pai Kau at the Nathan Hotel on the night of January 28, when trouble started over some money matters and the defendants were said to have struck the complainant necessitating his removal to the Kowloon Hospital, where he was confined for some weeks.In giving evidence yesterday Wong Cheong said that he was one of the party which was gam-

a man named Yong came and called him to the Hotel saying that a good friend of his (witness)

PAI KAU DECIDED

Witness went to the hotel and there he met complainant. There were also others among whom were first and second defendants.
It was decided that the party
play pai kau and first defendant was the banker.Witness said that he did not play the first few hands but later he joined in the game. He won a few hands at first and after he won now and again. He then noticed that there was cheating
going on and told the complainant
who told witness to stop playing and he did so. At that time five Shanghai men entered the room and witness saw the third and fourth defendants. Third defendant shouted "search person,"
and some of the Shanghai men in the room thought that they were policemen and ran out to the verandah.Tsang Kan Sang and witness were left in the room and third defendant then told complainant
to take off his coat but he refused to do so. Then the whole party set upon him and attempted to take off his fur coat. Fourth deterday at the Supreme Court.Judgment had originally been given in favour of the plaintiff on the strength of the non-appearance on remand before Mr. Macfadyen in 1934. An application o-set aside the judgment in order to contest the claim had been successfully brought by the alleged partners Lau Wah and Choy Ying.

Mr. Hin-shing Lo, instructed by Mr. M. A. da Silva, appeared for the plaintiff, and Lau Wah and Choy Ying were represented by Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jr., instructed by Mr. W. M. Brown.The case for the plaintiff is that the firm should be held liable for the loan as Tam Cheuk borrowed the money on its behalf.Yesterday Mr. Lo concluded his final address to His Lordship after which His Lordship summed up and gave the verdict to the first defendant. He ruled that (1) ex-

was given on the credit of Tam Cheuk.Judgment was then given to the first defendant with costs.Complainant's platinum watch and $40 from his pocket.

STRUCK AND KICKED

Witness went on to say that he saw the third defendant strike
the complainant on the chest and kicked him in the abdomen.
While he was on the ground they struck him again. They were all arrested by some policemen and taken to the station. At the station first defendant said that the dant his Worship said that there was no evidence against him with regards to the assault charge, and bound him over in the sum of $50

to keep the peace for one year.Second defendant was bound over in the sum of $75.From the evidence given against third defendant, His Worship was satisfied that he did take part in the assault and fined him $20 and bound him over to keep the peace in the sum of $75. Fourth defendant was similarly dealt with and was also ordered to pay $5 as compensation.

INTERESTING TALK ON MUSIC IN WORDS

Miss Curtin At English Association Meeting

Enthusiasm was shown by several listeners after an interesting talk by Miss Kathleen P. Curtin, B.A., entitled "Music in Words," which was delivered to a large audience at the fifth meeting of the English Association yesterday, for the formation of an verse speaking association locally.

The talk was given at the Helena May Institute, and was presided over by Lady Southern, who also voiced her agreement with the scheme. Lady Southern expressed regret at the inability of Sir William Horne and Sir Thomas Southern to be present. Mrs. Q.A.A. Macfadyen (Hon. Secretary) supported Lady Southern in the chair, while among those who attended were the Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo and Mrs. Lo, Lady Pollock and Mrs. Pitter.

In giving an interesting and illuminative talk, Miss Curtin quoted a large number of poets, both ancient and modern, and an innovation, which forcibly demonstrated the different tones of the speaking voice, was the use of phonographic records reproducing the "music in verse."

Addressing the gathering, Miss Curtin read out a portion of an essay by Arthur Machen, which she said she thought would turn a fitting comment to start her lecture.

All of us, she said, however unmusical, had at one time or another been haunted by a phrase of a beautiful melody we had heard. The speaker quoted a few verses from the poem "Romance" by W. J. Turner to demonstrate the effect of the music in words.

The speaker asked why was it that in spite of the perfect musical combination of beautiful words to be found in every page of the great literature of all languages people did not go to their affairs every day with one of those phrases ringing in their ears. It was, she said, because people did not hear great literature; they merely read it, or perused it with their eyes only. She thought that the invention of printing had destroyed to a great extent one of the finest cultural influences and pleasures of mankind—the enjoyment of music in words.

Continuing the speaker said that in ancient Greece, as Aristotle tells in his "Poetics," the early tragedians used themselves to sustain the dialogue in their plays. They would recite their words to their audience and it was largely on the music of the language that the people would judge of their excellence. So it was too with one of the earliest forms of poetry in England, Scotland and Ireland—the ballad. Thus this form of poetry was born from the most primitive and natural artistic impulses in the heart of the common people, a sense of rhythm and the feeling for music which expressed themselves in dance and song. It further proof were needed of this inseparable connection between poetry and music, they needed only to think of the name given to a vast body of poetry—"lyric," which meant "belonging to the lute or lyre." Lyric poetry fulfilled the same imitative function as the lute or lyre, only using words instead of instrument.

IMPORTANCE OF SOUND

The speaker next showed how important a part that artistic beauty the sound was, and how much of the writer's mood, characteristics and thought could be conveyed by the sound alone. She quoted several authorities by ancient and modern poets to show the importance played by the sound. So she stated in Latin they noticed the flexibility, the ease and rapidity of movement; the romantic sound of the Greek verse compared with the more sonorous, more weighty more dignified movement of the Latin. So too, there was daintiness, precision, neatness and finish in French verse; clarity and sweetness in English; softness and haunting melancholy in Irish, and sturdy robustness, curiously mingled with a somewhat sentimental pathos, in Scottish poetry. English literature alone ranged from what was termed "jazz poetry" to grand organ music and complicated symphonies. The speaker gave a few instances, to demonstrate this effect.

Continuing Miss Curtin gave a brief account of some of the technical devices used by poets and prose-writers to produce certain musical effects. Alliteration, the repetition of letters or sounds, could be used, if carefully handled, very musically. The repeated "m" sounds, "the moan of doves, in immemorial clime, and the murmur of innumerable bees," was a perfect example. Repetition of the "l", "s", "v" and the use of onomatopoeic words and sounds was common. The onomatopoeic device had been extended considerably by more modern poets in their imitative rhythms where one heard rhythms instead of words. Macfadyen's "Cargoes" was a good example.

ULTRA-MODERN POETRY

Dealing with the technique of the new music ultra-modern poetry, the speaker said she would like to touch on an entirely new theory of poetic technique, which was being developed in ultra-modern poetry and prose. The old poetic diction with its wine and roses, its nightingales and chalices had given way to a clean-cut, economic verse-structure and word usage. The old poetic subjects too had given way to a new range of subjects, in which the word and works of man were as much objects of the poet's veneration, and wonder as the works of nature. Another characteristic of this new poetry was the growing use of words that were more sound than image. Like all new things it was exciting, and might well lead to something as great as any poet's work of art in the past. She did not mention the Bible or the works of Milton, Keats and Shakespeare in this connection because she realized they had the finest quality of art wherein no effects were obvious. They had that apparent simplicity that marked the work of the supreme artist.

In conclusion, the speaker gave a resume of the movements which were now being made to revive the art of verse and prose speaking. These experiments were chiefly attempts to educate adults to a real appreciation of literature as music.

Most important work in this direction was being done by Marjorie Gullan, Principal of the Polytechnic School of Speech Training in London and founder of the Glasgow Verse Speaking Choir. Besides her training of adults she had interested herself in a movement which was vitally important—that of speech training in schools. In the past there had been some attempt to train children in speaking, but unfortunately it had almost invariably led to an artificial and overstrained method of elocution. Matters were often made worse by the addition of unnatural and even grotesque gestures applied with ludicrous effect to non-dramatic verse, breaking the rhythm which was the essential element of the music. Marjorie Gullan on the other hand had introduced a method of speech and rhythm training which, if widely adopted, would, the speaker felt sure, accomplish the end which teachers desired, namely to give children a true love of literature, which they would develop and broaden when they left school and which would be an inspiration to their whole lives.

A phonographic record of one of Miss Gullan's choirs was then played which demonstrated eloquently the practicability of her methods of teaching.

VOICE OF THANKS

Discussion on the lecture was then invited by Lady Southern. Professor R. K. Simpson thanked Miss Curtin for her interesting talk, and said that practical consequences should be forthcoming. One of the things which he missed in this part of the world, which they would be able to enjoy at home, were the verse speaking occasions at musical festivals, and he thought that they, as the English Association, might do something on the lines Miss Curtin had suggested. There was no doubt, he said, that at least fifty per cent. of the music they had listened to this afternoon had been in Miss Curtin's voice. It had been a very great pleasure to listen to one whose voice was so highly cultivated.

Mr. J. Russell, seconding the vote of thanks, also suggested a verse speaking association in Hong Kong if it were possible. Other speakers also supported this suggestion.

On a proposal by Lady Southern, Mrs. Barker was appointed acting honorary secretary and treasurer.

URBAN COUNCIL

Power To Institute Summary Proceedings Conferred

The fortnightly meeting of the Urban Council was held yesterday in the Board Room of the Sanitary Department, Post Office Building, presided over by Mr. W. J. Carrie, head of the Sanitary Department.

Among the matters discussed was the minute of the chairman relative to deputing authority to any officer lawfully performing the duties of Chief Inspector or Senior Inspector to institute summary proceedings for breaches of by-laws.

It was agreed that the authority be delegated.

Those who attended included:—Hon. A. R. Wellington, C.M.G., Vice-Chairman; Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, D. P. W.; Hon. Mr. R. A. C. North, S. C. A.; Hon. Mr. T. H. King, I. G. P.; Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo, Mr. F. C. Hall, Dr. R. A. de Castro Basso, Mr. L. C. F. Bellamy, Dr. Li Shu Fan, Mr. A. el Arculli, Dr. S. N. Chau, Mr. C. J. Roe Secretary; Mr. Im Ping-tseung Asst. Secretary.

LICENCES APPLICATIONS

Applications for licences for various purposes were refused on the recommendation of the Select Committee and confirmed by the Council, from the following applications: at Lot No. 5918, Sai Kung Road (wood preserving licence); No. 18, Sung Hung Lane, second floor (offensive trade licence) and No. 13, Third Street, first floor (food factory licence).

It was agreed that the application for the registration of No. 100, Johnston Road, ground floor as a dairy, be deferred for a fortnight to enable members of the Council to visit the premises and form an opinion of their own. The Chairman stated that both the Select Committee and the Council were divided in their opinion on the matter. The use of the word "dairy" was perhaps rather misleading, and should really read "milk-shop". He himself had not visited the premises in question but understood that it was a commodore shop.

Dr. Wellington stated that he had visited the place, and formed the opinion that it was hardly suitable for a dairy. The shop appeared to be shared between a tailor and fruit seller. An icebox was kept on the premises for the purposes of storing some milk bottles which in turn were retailed.

The Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo recalled that in the new defunct Sanitary Board some by-laws were formed permitting the sale of milk in such shops, providing that the bottles were sealed and had been obtained from a reputable dairy.

After further discussion Mr. Bellamy moved that the matter be deferred and that the premises be visited.

OWNER TO BE CONSULTED

The application for a restaurant licence at Nos. 423 and 425, first floors, and Nos. 427 and 429, ground and first floors, Hennessy Road, was deferred for a month, the Chairman stating that both the Select Committee and the Council were divided in their opinion on the matter. According to the Senior Inspector who had visited the premises, he had found that they were in no better condition than since his last visit. But in fairness to the proprietor, Mr. Carrie said that this former had not been officially informed about the defects that existed on the premises.

He would therefore suggest that the matter be deferred for a month and that the proprietor be informed by letter "to put his house in order." Difficulty had been experienced in the past in getting in touch with the man as he was never on the premises when the Inspector called.

The letter would be based on the various reports submitted to the Council. When put to the vote, this course was unanimously agreed upon.

of the English Association, during the temporary absence from the Colony of Mrs. Q.A.A. Macfadyen on leave. While thanking Mrs. Macfadyen for her excellent work during her term of office, Lady Southern also extended a welcome to Mrs. Barker, remarking she would be of great assistance and joy to the Association.

OBITUARY

Miss A.A. Baptista

It is with deep regret that we have to record the death of Miss Adelaide A. Baptista, a member of a well-known local Portuguese family, which occurred at her residence, No. 5, St. Joseph's Terrace on Monday, after a brief illness.

The late Miss Baptista, who was 83 years of age, was a sister of Mr. J. Baptista of the Insurance Department of Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Company Limited.

Although she had lived a very secluded life, especially during her later years, the late Miss Baptista was greatly loved in her own family circle, which included a host of nephews and nieces.

THE FUNERAL

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at the Roman Catholic Cemetery and Rev. Father G. M. Spada performed the burial services at the grave-side.

The principal mourners at the funeral were Mr. J. Baptista (brother), Messrs. M.F. A.A. D. C. Baptista and J. C. Rozario (nephews) and several other nieces.

THOSE PRESENT

Among the large gathering of relatives and friends who assembled together to pay their respects were Messrs. F. M. P. de Graca, J. A. M. Graca, A. F. Osmund, A. J. C. Roena, L. Ribeiro, A. J. V. Ribeiro, A. F. Castilho, J. Barros, G. E. Rocha, J. Webster, F. M. Marques, A. M. de Silva, C. H. Osmund, E. M. de Rocha, H. Dixon, R. Aleraka, D. M. Tavares, V. F. V. Ribeiro, G. F. Tavares, G. E. Carvalho, J. L. Aves, Mr. and Mrs. Manson and others.

Wreaths were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Manson and Family, Mr. Leopoldo Eugenio Rozario, Prima J. M. Rodrigues, Albertina-Ernest, K. Okamoto, Celeste Maria Ozario and others.

THE STANHOPE GOLD MEDAL

First Award To A Woman

London, Feb. 12.

The Royal Humane Society's Stanhope Gold Medal for 1935 was yesterday awarded to Miss Evelyn Graham Irons, M.A., a London journalist, who last July rescued a woman from drowning in a rough sea at Tressath Beach, Cardigan Bay.

Miss Irons is the first woman to receive the Stanhope Gold Medal, and the first woman since Grace Darling to receive the gold medal of the society.

Miss Irons was referred to as "Case No. 52938" at the annual court of the society at Watlington House, Adelphi. The rescue was described in the papers which were before the members of the court.

On July 29 Mrs. MacSweeney, a good swimmer, while bathing in a rough sea, was caught in a cross-current, and swept seaward. Miss Irons, who was swimming about 50 yards away, heard her cries and swam over and supported her while calling for assistance. A strong swimmer tried to get through the breakers and failed. A small boat was launched and capsized, and attempts to launch a larger boat failed.

The beach was crowded, but no one could do anything effectual. Mrs. MacSweeney became unconscious, and Miss Irons continued to support her, the waves breaking over them continuously.

"At this stage," the report stated, "there was small prospect of any rescue; Miss Irons, who could then probably have saved herself, decided to stay by her friend and save her, or perish in the attempt. After about an hour the current changed and swept the two ladies nearer inshore. A strong swimmer put on a line and succeeded in swimming out to them, others on the beach holding the line and forming a human chain close to the breakers, and all were hauled ashore. Mrs. MacSweeney was unconscious and was with difficulty brought round; Miss Irons was very exhausted."

The report added: "Fresh gale blowing. Sea rough and choppy. Rescue at least 300 yards out from shore and in deep water."

The secretary said that there was not a Stanhope Gold Medal in the days of Grace Darling, but she was awarded the gold medal. Miss Irons was awarded the silver medal of the Extraordinary General Meeting

An Extraordinary General Meeting of the Company will be held immediately upon the termination of the 47th Ordinary Yearly Meeting for the purpose of considering and, if thought fit, passing the following Resolutions, namely:—

- "That it is desirable to 'capitalize' the sum of $1,500,000, being part of the 'undivided profits' of the Company standing to the credit of the Reserve Fund, and accordingly that a 'bonus' of $1,500,000 be declared and that such bonus be applied on behalf of the 'persons who on the 29th day of February, 1936, are the registered holders of the 450,000 issued shares of the Company in payment in full for 150,000 shares of the Company of $10 each and that such 150,000 shares be credited as fully paid be accordingly allotted to such 'persons respectively in the proportion of one of such shares for every three of the said 450,000 shares then held by such persons respectively and that such shares shall rank for dividend as from the 1st day of 'January, 1936'."
- "That if, on such distribution as aforesaid, any person would be entitled to a 'fraction of a share, the 'Directors shall, in lieu of 'issuing fractional certificates, 'cause the whole share to be 'allotted to a person or persons to be named by the 'Directors and such share shall, at such time as the 'Directors think fit, be sold 'and the net proceeds distributed amongst the persons entitled to the fractions making up the share."

society last September. There were three other silver medallists, who were considered as candidates for the gold medal. One of them was a Fijian, Jone Draunimasi, who tried to rescue his nephew, William Date, from a barracuda, which, according to the Governor of Fiji, who reported the case to the society, the natives fear more than the shark. Jone and William were diving for shells. Jone saw the barracuda attack William and seize his arm, which was severed at the shoulder. Jone dived, seized his nephew in his arms, and using his legs only swam for the reef, followed by the fish. Two other natives brought a boat as quickly as possible, but William died in a few minutes.

EXPLANATIONS

Those who read, we believe, will agree with those who heard the debate that the man who comes best out of it is—strangely enough—the man whom everybody had agreed to regard as the culprit. If his policy is, as has been alleged, a policy of running away, at least he did not run away from his policy—which is rather more than can be pleaded for his colleagues.

Sir Samuel Hoare not only won the sympathy of the House of Commons; but we think he convinced many Members that there was a case for the course he had taken. There has been a great deal of talk about collective security; but the late Secretary of State reduced it all to its proper proportions when he reminded the House that not a single one of the League of Nations except ourselves had moved one ship, one aeroplane or one soldier to meet the emergency which might arise from the imposition of sanctions. They were all very bold in debate; but in practice Great Britain had an entire monopoly of the odium and the risk. Sir Samuel Hoare desired to maintain our unity with France; he desired also to avoid two catastrophes—either a general conflagration in Europe, or a single war between Italy and Great Britain—and these were the courses into which we were drifting. If it were attacked, we agree with Sir Samuel Hoare that the British Navy would give a good account of itself. It has the habit of coming out victorious. But it can hardly be thought wise to blunder into a war which we do not want, leading to consequences which we cannot foresee, for a principle which breaks down the moment it is applied.

Such, at all events, were the motives which led the Secretary of State into proposals which he disliked only less than the alternatives which he desired to avoid. He may have been right or he may have been wrong; but those who have been disarming the Navy for fifteen years on the principle that all wars are criminal have no right to criticise him. If he drew back from a policy which he saw was leading to a war which we did not intend, and for which we have not prepared, then we think that sensible people will be inclined to agree at least with his motive if they cannot altogether with his method of extrication. However, it is idle to discuss these things since the clamour has prevailed and his resignation has been accepted. But here we may say at least a word in protest of the attacks directed against Sir Robert Vansittart, who as a public servant is not responsible for policy, but is charged with carrying it out. If it were true, as is alleged, that his resignation is being considered, it would be an act of politeness on the part of the Government. But we refuse to believe it.

Speaking of responsibility we cannot profess to be greatly enlightened by the speech of the Prime Minister, who neglected to answer even the questions which he himself had raised in his previous speech. What were, for example, those dreadful secrets upon which his lips were sealed? We shall never know. Upon reflection he finds it more convenient to lay the chief part of the blame upon the British week-end, and the difficulties of liaison between London and Paris of a Sunday. If he had only known on Sunday what he knew on Monday morning things would have gone differently. Even the most indulgent critic is driven to reply that the doctrine of collective responsibility (like the doctrine of collective security) cannot well be shifted upon one member only. The Government approved of the Foreign Secretary's policy—no matter whether on a Sunday or a Monday, and having approved of it, it

CONSCRIPTION IN CHINA

Stir Caused By Report

Shanghai, Mar. 3.
A stir has been caused here by the report that the Government has announced military conscription, but this is now authoritatively stated to be due to a misapprehension of Nanking's plans which at present include only experimental military training for government employees.

Meanwhile the military authorities are working out a draft conscription law which will not be ready for some time.
A Japanese Embassy spokesman, seen by Reuters, said: The scheme at present is only on paper and one in which we would not take much notice."

NANKING ANNOUNCEMENT
Nanking, Mar. 3.
The Government announced today that military conscription would be enforced immediately throughout the country providing for two years' service on the part of all able-bodied men, from eighteen to forty-five years of age.

CRICKET TOUR IN S. AFRICA

Unique Record By Australia

Durban, Mar. 3.
Australia won the fifth and final test by an innings and six runs, their score of 455 carrying them to victory.

South Africa, who scored 222 in the first innings, were all out for 227 in the second innings after being 196 for 3 at lunch time. Mitchell scored 12, not out.

On a wearing wicket, Australia's famous bowler, C. V. Grimmett, was turning the ball at almost right angles. His average was 48 overs, 23 maidens, 73 runs, 6 wickets.

O'Reilly's average was 40 overs, 13 maidens, 47 runs, 4 wickets. The result of the tour works out at 12 wins, no defeats, three draws.

NEW JOCKEY TO TRY GOLDEN MILLER

London, Mar. 3.
Greatly worried by Golden Miller's refusal at Newbury, Miss Dorothy Paget, owner of the horse, is trying a new jockey, Evan Williams, when the horse runs in the Cheltenham Gold Cup. Williams may ride Golden Miller in the Grand National.
It is thought that Golden Miller, as is the custom of some horses, has taken a dislike to jockey Wilson. There is no question of Wilson's riding ability.

ALBERTA TO INCREASE INCOME TAX

Edmonton, Mar. 3.
The Special Government of Alberta at present is on the first budget in which the deficit is estimated at $2,500,000 which will be met by increase of income tax and other taxes. There is no mention of social credit whereby every adult will receive $25 monthly as wages from the Government.

might have been more manly to stand by him—and it. There might seem also, in the circumstances, to be some danger in the almost slavish adulation of the League of Nations. That institution may be excellent for purposes of the platform; but if it cannot be relied upon to furnish a ship or a man in support of its own policies, there is some danger to the national interest in treating it as a sacrosanct and almost infallible institution upon which the safety and the honour of the country must continue to be founded.

U.S. LIFTMEN ON STRIKE

Citizens Marooned In Skyscrapers

New York, Mar. 2.
Thousands of citizens were today marooned in skyscrapers or faced ascent or descent of endless stairways, as a result of the long threatened strike of liftmen for better pay.

The whole of Manhattan Island and Wall Street and the congested midtown section is affected, but the towering Empire State Building, where the lift staff is under private control, and Radio City Building, are not involved.

Mayor La Guardia has proclaimed a state of emergency and has called upon all citizens to co-operate with city officials in maintaining the public health and protecting life. He announced the City would take over the operation of the lifts in all residential buildings over six stories high.

He is calling a meeting of union officers and representatives of the owners to try to end the strike, in which the union claims 30,000 are participating.

The police have taken extraordinary precautions to prevent disorder and up to now there have been twenty-three arrests.

RUSH FOR JOBS
New York, Mar. 3.
Thousands swamped the offices asking for jobs to replace the striking liftmen. The crush was so great in one office that the floor cracked.

According to the New York "Daily Mirror," roving bands are terrorising strike-breakers in the leading apartment houses on the west side. Lifts in London Terrace, the largest apartment house in the world, are reported to have been sabotaged. So far there have been over sixty arrests following widespread minor disorders.

Hundreds of recruits armed with truncheons are guarding liftmen sticking to their jobs.

ALLEGED RED CROSS VIOLATION
Rome, Mar. 3.

Flagrant violation of the Red Cross conventions by the Abyssinians is charged by the Italians in a memorandum to the League. It is added that the atrocity of the Abyssinians is shown by hanging and torture of prisoners captured.

Japanese Ambassador TO CHINA
Shanghai, March 3.

The Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Arita, is proceeding to Nanking tomorrow aboard the Japanese warship Otaka to present his credentials to Mr. Lin Sen on Thursday.

It is rumoured that Clark Gable, the cinema star will shortly cross the Pacific by the "China Clipper" and will come to Hong Kong from Macao.

Mr. Manning L. Radlton of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co. is transferred to Peking to take charge of the Import department there.

The offices of the Hong Kong Jockey Club, of which Messrs. Linstead & Davis are the Secretaries, have been moved from The Gloucester Building to The Exchange Building on the first floor. Their new offices are very spacious, the Board Room being particularly well decorated.

Ng So, a coolie, working at the Netherlands Harbour Works, Hong Kong, was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital on Monday suffering from injuries received while working at an engine.

One case of Cerebro-Spinal Fever was reported to the Health Authorities for the 24 hours ended on Monday.

The following is the return of cases of Notifiable Diseases which have been notified as having occurred in the Colony during the week ended on February 29:—

Diphtheria 8 cases, 5 deaths, 1 imported; Enteric Fever 4 cases, 1 imported; Chicken Pox 1 case; Cerebro-Spinal Fever 4 cases, 1 death; Tuberculosis 55 cases, all fatal.

The Japanese cruiser, Yubari, with Rear-Admiral Hosokawa on board, left leave Hong Kong yesterday after a short visit here.

TREATY WITH BRITAIN

Egyptian Leader Optimistic

Cairo, Mar. 2.
The conclusion of a treaty cementing the Anglo-Egyptian friendship was not only a political necessity for the two countries, but a moral necessity for humanity, declared Nahas Pasha in an address at the opening of the Anglo-Egyptian negotiations at the magnificent Zaafaran Palace today.

Nahas Pasha added that this time they were determined to succeed.

Sir Miles Lampson, British High Commissioner, replying, promised that Great Britain would not be found wanting in good-will, she looked towards an era of complete sovereignty in Egypt, when Britain and Egypt would appear before the world as allies and equals.

FORMAL OPENING
Cairo, March 2.

The Conference for the revision of the Anglo-Egyptian relations was officially opened here on Monday afternoon in the Zaafaran Palace, in presence of Premier Ali Maher Pasha, and the leading British and Egyptian officials, when the inaugural speeches were held by the British High Commissioner, Sir Miles Lampson and the leader of the Egyptian Delegation, Nahas Pasha. The negotiations proper will not be begun till March 9.

COMMUNIST SCOURGE IN SHANGHAI
Peiping, Mar. 3.

The Red scourge in Shansi is growing worse. At least ten thousand Communists who crossed the Yellow River have entered the province and are ravaging the southwest section, as a result of which a state of emergency is reported to have been declared at Taiyuanfu. More than a thousand provincial troops were practically wiped out by the overwhelming superior force of Reds near Shihjo.

Meanwhile it is stated that troops of Wang I-cheh and Yuh Sueh-chung stationed in Shensi territory will enter Shansi in pursuit of the Reds who are expected to move southward in an endeavour to enter Honan.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY CHAIRMANSHIP
New Appointment
London, Mar. 2.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, has announced the appointment of Captain Douglas Hacking, M.P., to the chairmanship of the Conservative Party Organisation.

Baron Stonehaven's resignation from this post was announced early to-night.

In a letter to Mr. Baldwin, Baron Stonehaven states the responsibilities of the post make it increasingly difficult for him to devote to it the time it demands.

BRITISH DEFENCE PLANS REVEALED IN NINETEEN PAGE DOCUMENT

No Alternative But To Review Our Defences

Comprehensive Scheme For Strengthening The Three Services

London, March 3.

The White Paper on Defence issued this morning contains nineteen pages dealing with the historical position and says that in recent years successive Governments have deliberately taken the course of postponing defence expenditure in order to give the best possible opportunity for development of a new international order in which such expenditure might be avoided.

"We really have no alternative in the present state of the world but to review our defences and provide the necessary means both for safeguarding ourselves against aggression and playing our part in the enforcement by common action of international obligations." The Government therefore have made a prolonged and exhaustive examination of the present state of the Navy, Army and Air Force and the proposals they now make represent nothing more than what are found essential in the present circumstances.

Pointing out that the forces of other great nations can without risk be concentrated in limited areas near their own shores, the document says "our worldwide responsibilities render this impossible. The history of the Italo-Abyssinian dispute and our action in regard thereto illustrates how claims upon our defensive strength may arise at short notice in various parts of the world. These claims can only be discharged if we made adequate provision to meet them, and the scale whereupon such provision is made must be considered in relation to continued increase in armaments in many foreign countries."

ITALIAN THREATS DIRECTED AT BRITAIN

Dealing with the Abyssinian dispute, the document relates that throughout last summer Britain intimated to Italy frequently her anxiety over the course she was seemingly pursuing and in conjunction with other members of the League Britain spared no effort to prevent the final breach.

In the meantime circumstances were developing which compelled Britain to take precautionary action in the Mediterranean and Red Sea.

The fundamental difference between the League and Italy, combined with the possibility of League action, led during July and August to a campaign of violent menacing propaganda in Italy, largely directed against Britain as one of the foremost upholders of the Covenant.

SAFEGUARD MEASURES

The point was reached in August when Britain could no longer disregard the possibility of an incident which might precipitate an extension of the conflict.

The Government felt the best way to prevent an incident was to guard against it, more particularly in view of the extent to which the Italian garrison at Libya was being reinforced. Therefore it was decided to strengthen and redouble the naval forces, increase defences, garrisons and air forces at Gibraltar, Malta and Aden, besides Egypt from August 22.

The situation was daily watched by a standing sub-committee of the Committee of Imperial Defence under the chairmanship of the Prime Minister.

Although the Government was able to make dispositions which the situation required, they were embarrassed by the decline of effective strength of armaments by sea, air and land and it was only possible to safeguard the position in the Mediterranean and Red Sea by denuding other areas to an extent which might have involved grave risks.

ARMING OF OTHERS

Referring to the rising level of armaments in other countries, the document remarks it is true the increase of armed strength of the other nations who will co-operate for collective security may increase the League's power, but the increase of armed strength may also prove added power in the hands of a possible aggressor.

In any event collective security can hardly be maintained unless every member of the League is prepared to make a contribution, adequate in relation to its resources to the strength of the whole.

GERMAN REARMAMENT

Detailing rearmament in other countries, the document states that German rearmament was proceeding rapidly throughout the year. There has been no concealment as regards the fact of rearmament which has been referred to with satisfaction in statements of German public men.

but regarding the details there is still a great deal of secrecy.

The document recalls that last March the German government announced conscription, based on one year's service and establishment of a peace time army of 55,000 men. Chancellor Hitler told Sir John Simon that Germany was aiming at air parity with Britain. Since then there has been continuous development of the German Air Force.

As regards the Anglo-German naval treaty, the document remarks that the new German Navy, even within this limitation, is an addition to world armaments which cannot be left out of account.

OTHER POWERS

France reintroduced two years service in the spring of 1935. Her Air Force was undergoing important reorganisation and re-equipment. The barrier in the north-eastern frontiers are being extended to cover also the northern departments.

The Belgian Army expenditure shows a heavy increase in the eastern frontier fortresses which are being rapidly strengthened and modernised.

The Italian Army is on a war footing and the Air Force is being rapidly and completely re-equipped and enlarged.

The Soviet Army numbers 1,300,000. The Air Force is being increased.

Re-equipment of the Japanese Army continues in accordance with a comprehensive programme. In 1935-36 the Army and Navy accounted for 48 per cent. of the budget, of which the deficit was £45,000,000.

The United States defence expenditure increased £108,000,000 to £180,000,000 excluding pensions.

BRITISH NAVY NEEDS

In order to render the Navy capable under all circumstances of preserving sea communications and maintain free passage between the different parts of the Empire for troops supplies, it was necessary to proceed with new construction at a more rapid rate than in recent years and also make good existing deficiencies in ammunition stores.

The London Naval Treaty prohibits building of new battleships till the end of 1936.

Two new capital ships will be laid down early in 1937 and modernisation of existing battleships will be continued.

Britain's aim is to increase cruisers to a total of seventy of which sixty will be under age and ten over age. Five cruisers will be included in the 1936 programme.

REPLACEMENT PROGRAMME

A steady replacement programme of destroyers and submarines is contemplated while the present rate of construction will be continued in the case of sloops and small craft generally.

A new aircraft carrier of a smaller type will be laid down shortly.

The growing importance of the Fleet Air Arm necessitates considerable expansion.

Compared with other navies such as Japan and the United States, the number of first line aircraft is considerably lower than it should be and it is intended to bring it to substantially higher figures in the next few years, necessitating a corresponding increase in personnel.

It will be necessary also to increase naval personnel to man the new vessels and repair existing deficiencies by March 31, 1937. The number is expected to rise by 31,000 men.

ARMY STRENGTH

The present peace time strength of the regular field Army is about 115,000 men. Compared to the 1914 army it has been reduced by twenty-one battalions of infantry despite the increasing peace commitments.

Owing to the reduction of infantry Britain is unable to maintain the balance of Home and foreign service battalions. The result is hardship to units who have given additional foreign service and injury to both recruiting and efficiency.

The Government propose to raise four new infantry battalions. It is not intended to make a further increase in fighting units, but it is urgently necessary that existing formations be organised in a very effective form and equipped with the most modern armament.

INDUSTRIAL CAPACITY

Dealing with the need for ensuring the most effective use of industrial capacity and man power for production of material, the document emphasises that during war time the Government entrusted special powers devoted to winning the war which will enable them to exercise complete control of industry.

"To-day we are living in peace in a period of great commercial and industrial activity. What we have to do is to carry through in the limited time measures which will make exceptionally heavy demands on industry and certain classes of skilled labour without impeding the course of normal trade, requiring very careful organisation and willing co-operation both of leaders of industry and Trade Unions. The Government has every confidence that these conditions will be fulfilled."

SAVED FROM SCRAPPING

H.M.S. Hawkins And Sister Ships

London, Mar. 3.

There is reason to believe as a result of the Naval Conference discussions that the cruiser Hawkins, late Admiral Leveson's flagship in China in 1922-23, and three sister cruisers will be saved from the scrap heap to which they are doomed by the London Treaty at the end of the year. Their 7.5-inch guns will be replaced by 6-inch guns to satisfy the terms of the Treaty.

The worn out ships of the Caledon and Ceres classes will be scrapped instead.

Naval circles were long agitating to save the Hawkins and sister vessels.

Under:

the Territorials, the new programme will increase first line strength of the Air Force in Britain to about 1,750 aircraft exclusive of the Fleet Air Arm.

Augmentation of offensive and defensive power resulting from the revised plans is greatly in excess of the numerical increase.

The Air Force has responsibilities in the general scheme of Imperial Defence. The Government propose to increase approximately twelve squadrons in order to locate air units at convenient places on strategic air routes.

Particular attention has been given to provision of adequate reserves of men and material at the shortest possible time.

Meantime the passive side of air defence has not been neglected. The plans which have been prepared over a number of years are now approaching a stage when they can be put into operation.

CONSTANT WATCH

The document emphasises that plans for improvement of the three services must be regarded as flexible, subject to variation of time.

The whole field will have to be kept under constant review. The new conditions whether arising from changed dispositions of other nations or developments in design or invention must be met by corresponding variation of our plans.

EXAMINING COMMITTEE

The examination of the defence problem was entrusted to a sub-committee of the Committee of Imperial Defence consisting of Permanent Secretaries of the Treasury, Foreign Office chiefs and staff of the three Services. Their conclusions were submitted to the Defence Committee of the Cabinet presided by the Prime Minister at whose invitation, in view of the importance of the industrial side, Lord Weir became a member of the Committee, and gave active assistance in formulating recommendations to the Cabinet.

The document reproduces Mr. Stanley Baldwin's statement of February 27 for appointment of a co-ordinating Minister on Defence and strengthening the various expert committees.

FRANCE AND GERMANY

Strong Appeal For Friendship

(Hong Kong Daily Press Special)

Paris, Mar. 3.

A passionate appeal to solve the problem of Franco-German relations by direct negotiations between the responsible French statesmen and Chancellor Hitler was made by M. Henri Pichot, President of the "Union Fédérale," the largest left wing War Veterans Association, in the newspaper "L'Ouvrier" on Tuesday.

"Franco-German reconciliation has always been desirable, but after the unfortunate effect the Franco-Soviet pact had on German public opinion, it has become an urgent necessity," states Pichot, declaring that the time for the exchange of diplomatic documents is now past, and the French statesmen should get into personal contact with Hitler as they did with Stalin, since there is no reason to apply a different standard in the two cases.

"It is neither opportune, reasonable nor honourable to pass over Germany's offer of reconciliation in silence," M. Pichot continues, pointing out that a reply to Hitler's offer was only in the interests of France.

"The day of reconciliation by direct negotiations has now come. The first round in the fight towards this end has already been won. The question of frontiers no longer exists. French statesmen whose authority is unaffected should be deputed for parleys with Hitler."

Transocean News Service.

olve consideration. Government factories will be chiefly responsible for output of explosives, propellants, filling shells, cartridges, manufacture of fuses, bombs, mines and torpedoes.

The normal Government contractors will supply warships, aircraft, artillery, machine guns, tanks, lorries, and stores of every description.

FIRMS TO ASSIST

During the investigation it became apparent for purposes of the peace time programme "that the field will have to be extended to other firms not normally engaged in armaments which would assist in the establishment of organisation for rapid extension of production in war time.

Arrangements will be made with selected firms for laying the necessary plant and machinery for a given output of selected articles and sufficient orders in peace time will be guaranteed to allow the requisite training in production.

Dealing with shortage of skilled labour which is already noticeable, the document says it will be for the industries concerned with such guidance as Government can give to ensure that vital processes are not delayed for want of necessary craftsmen.

WATCH ON PROFITEERS

Government is determined that the nation's needs will not serve to pile up extravagant profits. They have already received satisfactory assurances from the Federation of British Industries of their co-operation.

Control to prevent excessive profits will be effectively exercised by an inspection of books, and there will be adequate technical costings and audits on behalf of the state and arbitration cases in dispute.

Treasury control will be maintained throughout, but it will be important to see that the work is not delayed through over-elaboration of financial safeguards.

Owing to necessary flexibility in the programme and uncertainty of the rate of progress, it is impossible to estimate the total cost. The original estimates which will shortly be presented to Parliament will be supplemented by the provision of further defence measures mentioned in this document.

PEACE IN ETHIOPIAN CONFLICT

Italian Reserve Towards Geneva Decision

Rome, March 3.

Italian military circles maintain a very reserved attitude towards the Committee of Eighteen's surprising decision to initiate a new attempt at conciliation in the Abyssinian conflict. In view of the recent Italian successes in the war, it is pointed out that Italy at any rate has no interest in making peace proposals. Should these proposals, however, be made by a third party, Italy might consider accepting them, providing they took Italy's demands into full consideration, demands which were now of course far in excess of those made a few months ago.

As it is pointed out, Italy was not particularly interested in raising this question, no intimation was given as to the extent of these demands. It was stated that the Italian General Staff had already made all arrangements for carrying on the advance during the coming rainy period.

Further developments in the present discussions at Geneva are awaited, with the greatest interest, and it is reaffirmed that any increase in the severity of the sanctions would force Italy to take "corresponding measures" to deal with the new situation.

While the Sanctions Committee are continuing their deliberations at Geneva, the Italian Cabinet Council assembled on Tuesday forenoon with Signor Mussolini presiding for the session, in the course of which, the situation created by the Committee's new move for reconciliation will be thoroughly discussed.

Despite the universal surprise caused by M. Flaminio's new peace offer, general interest here is still centred on events in East Africa, there being little doubt that Marshal Badoglio's latest victory, which seems to have led to the complete annihilation of two Abyssinian armies, has immensely strengthened Italy's self-confidence and hopes for a final victory as well as for the conquest of the entire Abyssinian Empire.

LEAGUE RELATIONS

While Italian political circles take the view that the recent victories considerably enhance Italy's position in any negotiations to come, they are also aware that the military successes do not improve the prospects of agreement with the League of Nations.

While some observe that M. Flaminio's new attempt at reconciliation may possibly lead to some tangible results, Mr. Eden's proposition for a direct new peace appeal to the two belligerents is looked upon as a mere gesture and not a serious attempt at reconciliation.

LEAGUE MOVE

Geneva, Mar. 3.

It seems almost certain that the Committee of Thirteen will make a fresh appeal to the belligerents to end the war. The appeal will not be in the nature of a ultimatum, but press for a prompt reply.

It is generally believed that Geneva will propose an armistice, making reservation that any negotiation should be conducted under Geneva.

ETHIOPIAN OVERTURE

London, Mar. 3.

There is good reason to believe that a most important message from the Emperor of Abyssinia was received in London yesterday and transmitted to Mr. Anthony Eden at Geneva, states Mr. Ward Price in the "Daily Mail."

It indicates that the Emperor is prepared to discuss peace terms on the basis of the "status quo," namely, Italy retaining the portions of Abyssinia she has occupied, provided that the King of England will act as intermediary between Italy and Abyssinia.

It is expected that Signor Mussolini will reply to the overture to-day.

FINAL ATTEMPT

Rome, March 2.

The decision to call a meeting of the Committee of Thirteen at Geneva for a final attempt at conciliation, has been favourably received here. It is felt that this means that M. Pierre Flaminio, the French representative, is resisting Mr. Anthony Eden's sanctions tendencies.

The Italian Cabinet will meet tomorrow.

A spokesman to-day emphasised that Italy will not make peace proposals but will examine any made, provided they took into full account her rights.

It is authoritatively learned that if sanctions are stiffened Italy will take adequate counter measures.

Under:

PARIS SURPRISED

Paris, Mar. 2.

Mr. Anthony Eden's blunt frankness at Geneva has surprised Paris. It is interpreted as a warning that Britain herself will propose oil sanctions if Italy and Ethiopia decline to discuss peace.

The French Government will undoubtedly concur in whatever attitude Britain adopts, but it is pointed out that oil sanctions will go sorely against the grain.

FOOTBALL NEWS AND GOSSIP

From All Quarters

Aberdeen still have eyes on the Championship, but with five of their remaining nine games to be played away, including visits to Ibrox and Tynecastle in the last two weeks of the season, they really have a lot to do. It is probable that one more side will probably prove fatal, especially as Celtic and Rangers are at present relatively one point better placed. It promises to be a most testing final lap for the "Dons," who may find as other clubs have done, that to lead the League field and at the same time enjoy a run in the Cup competition impose a severe strain on playing resources as well as in other respects. Can they last the pace?

REGRETS

Whatever happens Aberdeen have proved a decided force this season, and their challenge has kept open the League question which otherwise would have developed at the turn of the year into the inevitable "straight fight." But Aberdeen must have regrets that so many points have been lost in drawn games, some of them at Pittodrie. The last seven games prior to Saturday yielded only seven points.

ALLOA'S "BOGEY"

Alloa have won renown this season for their series of successes on away grounds, but Dundee United have proved a real "bogy" team to them. United won the two League games in addition to the Cup replay at Tynecastle yesterday after two drawn games. Edinburgh enthusiasts, by the way, would be interested in the appearance of Watson, the Dundee United pivot, and Polard, the Alloa left half, in yesterday's game. Both were members of Hibernians' promotion-winning team of season 1932-33.

UNPROFITABLE NOVE

The injury suffered by Savage, Queen of the South's left back, probably cost his side both points. But it is questionable if Queen's took the best course under the circumstances in transferring Cummings to fill the vacancy. Cummings is generally agreed to be the schemer of the attack, and surely a more profitable change could have been arranged without depriving the forwards of their "general."

STRANGE FOR

Watford's triumph at Swindon was quite in keeping with their inconsistency throughout the season. On the Wednesday at home they failed to score against Aldershot, but at Swindon they notched half a dozen and so kept their very fine record in away games. At home they have 15 points from 18 games, with a record of 22 goals against 21; away they have thirteen points from a dozen games, with a goal average of 19 against 14.

Fletcher, the young centre-forward from Manchester City, has now settled down properly, and his "hat-trick" was not the chief feature of his play; it was the clever manner in which the Watford forwards were knit together, and Tommy Barnett is now back to his very best.

Nel McEwan will probably rate one of his best achievements as his confidence in making O'Brien a back. O'Brien was formerly a half-back, then he became a dashing inside left, and now he is regarded as one of the safest defenders the Vicarage Road club have ever had.

The Watford manager was at his wit's end to know how he was going to get a class goalkeeper when McHugh was badly injured in the Aldershot match but he managed to secure Ormond Jones on Friday from Norwich City, and it was a good omen for Ormond to see his colleagues win so handsomely in his first game. Jones is the former Backpool and Port Vale custodian, and he has had good experience.

SCORING WINGERS

It is many seasons since West Bromwich Albion had two scoring wingers like Mahon and Wood. Seldom a week passes without one or both of them finding the net. Stan Wood at one time lost his place in the first eleven to Boyes, but when the latter was hurt Stan took his chance again, and Boyes will have to be particularly smart to win back his position. The Throbbles must be glad that they did not listen to the appeals made for the transfer of the former Winsford player.

Promising youngsters always get a chance of a trial with the Wolves, the management not being afraid to give some of them a run with the senior team. Jack Taylor, who turned out at Brentford as partner to Shaw, is an old Banbury Grammar School player who joined the Wolverhampton side in January 1934, and has had an excellent run with the Central League eleven. Major Buckley thinks very highly of this youngster, and though he had a bad day against the southerners he is sure to come up trumps ere long.

The Wolves, who have been prominent in the last few months in regard to transfers and arrivals, have signed two more promising players in W. Letler, a centre-forward of Downing Tulleries, a Stoke-on-Trent junior side, and Davies, a goalkeeper of Canrock Town, the Birmingham League team. Both go to Molineux Ground, with good reputations. Davies was wanted by a number of clubs in the First and Second Divisions.

Walton are rather sweet on Kenny Kendrick, the dashing centre-forward of Halesowen, the Birmingham Combination club, who is a real opportunist. Their efforts to sign him are likely to be a waste of time. Kendrick has already had a number of offers from First Division clubs, but all have been declined owing to the fact that he does not want to lose his amateur status, which would affect his activities on the racing track, at which he has won many prizes.

The Wolves are paying a great deal of attention to the players of Alford Town, the Welsh junior club. Following the departure of Hayes to Molineux Grounds, a trial is being given to Arthur John, the goalkeeper from the same club, whilst they are also interested very much in Clarke, the Welsh club's centre-half. Several other first-class sides, including Bournemouth and Bristol City are also sweet on Clarke.

HOME FOOTBALL

Port Vale earned two league points from Hull City in a second division match this afternoon, winning by four goals to nil.

TEST CRICKET

Australia In Good Position

Durban, Mar. 3. South Africa appear to be facing defeat in the fifth and final Test match here against the Australians.

The visitors put themselves in a powerful position at the close of the day's play, when in response to South Africa's first innings score of 222, they collected 455.

Fingleton scored a century reaching 118 before dismissal while Darling contributed 62.

Mitchell bowled well for the South Africans capturing 5 for 87.

Batting a second time the home team hit up 110 for the loss of two wickets before close of play and are now 133 behind with eight wickets in hand.

matches at short notice. Such matches will be marked in red pencil on the list posted on the Notice Board in the Club and competitors are therefore requested to consult the same daily.

COMMENT ON GAMES

The main features in Monday's games will be the matches between Lai Kwong-tsun, once conqueror of S. A. Rumjahn, (the present holder of the Open Singles title) and X. Huchluma, and that between T. A. Pearce and T. C. Monaghan. In the former encounter, it is safe to predict that Lai will win the day, but Hachima, who is a good all-rounder and an experienced tournament player will put up a stiff opposition.

Pearce and Monaghan are two of the Club's leading players in the tournament. It is a pity that they have been drawn against each other so early in the competition, or else the Club's members will be able to see both going far in the tournament. Stamina and speed will win out, so Pearce is quite certain of entering the next round. Pearce, who is the possessor of a hard service and strong off-drive, will go far in the tournament.

On Tuesday, the centre of attraction will be the match between Tsui Wa Pil, once champion and I.M.A. Razack, leading player of the Indian R. C. Tsui should win, but not without difficulty.

A good game will be seen in the encounter between A. L. Sullivan and J. W. Leonard. Leonard's type of tennis is, to force his opponent into making mistakes and so will be on the defensive much more often than the offensive. On Tuesday he will be against a formidable player in Sullivan. A good game should be seen.

"THE LOST PATROL"

Charity Screening

Those of you who remember the film "The Dawn Patrol" which was screened in this Colony a few years ago may recall its wonderful reception and the magnificence of its all-male cast. Undoubtedly some have expressed the opinion that it was a picture well worth seeing again. It is extremely improbable that this fine picture will be resurrected, but it has been succeeded by a film on more stupendous lines, which in the opinion of the Director, John Ford, is the best thing he has done to date. This picture, "The Lost Patrol" is an epic story of military strategy and discipline in Mesopotamia during the Great War. A small patrol of British soldiers, harassed by hostile Arabs in a small desert oasis, putting up a gallant last stand against the forces of the enemy and of nature. Victor McLaglen as the steel-nerved sergeant gives what is perhaps the finest dramatic performance of his whole career. He is supported by Boris Karloff (whose reason breaks under the terrible strain), Reginald Denny and Wallace Ford. In aid of the Charity Funds of the Kowloon Y.M.C.A. Division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, "The Lost Patrol" (supplied by the courtesy of the Peacock Motion Picture Corporation, who are the local agents for R.K.O. films) will be screened at the Alhambra Theatre, Kowloon, at 11 a.m. on Sunday, March 8th at very popular prices.

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE

Tickets for the "The Lost Patrol" are obtainable in advance from all members of the Kowloon Y.M.C.A. Division of the Brigade and from a number of sympathisers who have volunteered to assist, and also from the Alhambra on the 7th inst. Prices are reasonable and purchasers are guaranteed a good entertainment, coupled with the knowledge that they have helped continue the good work of an unselfish Association, a brief resume of whose work follows.

It will be recalled that in 1932 during the Sino-Japanese conflict in Shanghai, a number of ambulance men and nurses, under the auspices of the Hong Kong St. John Ambulance Brigade, were sent to Shanghai to serve at the front. Among these men were quite a number from the Kowloon Y.M.C.A. Division. The leader of the mission, Mr. S. W. Wong, was then the officer-in-charge of the same division.

THEIR WORK

If one walks through Yau-mat, Shamshui, or Kowloon City, at about 7 or 8 o'clock at night, one would see smartly-uniformed young Chinese busily performing their duty giving free vaccinations to the poorer people thereby greatly assisting toward the stamping out of the dreaded small-pox. These young men are members of the Kowloon Y.M.C.A. Division, who, in addition to such work, attend any emergencies, rendering First Aid whenever required. A notable instance of their devotion to the cause of humanity was the recent tragedy in Woosung Street, Yau-mat, as it was members of that division that were first on the scene to render valuable assistance and tend to injuries.

All this work is entirely voluntary on the part of the members and is dependent entirely upon the goodwill of the public but is greatly hampered by lack of funds, to augment which, the show at the Alhambra has been organised.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST FOOTBALL POOLS

London, Mar. 2. In a letter to Sir John Simon, the Home Secretary, the English Football Association urges him and the Government, in view of the Bill which is shortly coming before the House of Commons in relation to Football Pools betting, to effect the speediest legislation possible to eliminate Pools betting on football.

A meeting of League clubs today decided by 26 votes to nil, with ten abstentions, to ask the league management committee for an immediate restoration of the original fixtures, and to restore the original fixtures for next Saturday.

FAMOUS BEAUTY OF 90'S DEAD

Mrs. Brown-Potter's Stage Career

London, Feb. 13. Mrs. Brown-Potter, whose death at her home on the Riviera is reported on Page 13, was a prominent figure on the London and American stage from her first professional appearance in London in 1887 until she retired in 1912.

She frequently appeared with the late Sir Herbert Beerbaum Tree, and her most noteworthy performance was as Miladi in his production of "The Three Musketeers" at His Majesty's Theatre in 1898.

Born in the Southern States of America 77 years ago she made her first public appearance at New Orleans at the age of 15, and was then advised by the manager of the local Opera House to study in Paris. Long before she decided on the stage, as a career she figured in amateur theatricals, and boasted that in one year in New York she made $10,000 for charity.

Later she came to London, and made her first appearance on the professional stage as Anne Sylvestre in Wilkie Collins' "Man and Wife" in March, 1887.

She returned to America the same year, and in October, with the late Kylie Bellew, appeared at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in "Civil War." She remained with Kylie Bellew until 1890, appearing as Juliet in "The Lady of Lyons," Kate Hardcastle in "The Stoops to Conquer," and Rosalind, Cleopatra, Franchell, Camille Florio, in "La Tosca," and Hero in "Hero and Leander."

PLAYED AT WINDSOR CASTLE

Later she toured in India, Australia, and China, and reappeared in London at the Shaftesbury Theatre in June, 1892, in "Hero and Leander." She appeared also at the Duke of York's Theatre in "Franchell," and at the Adelphi as Charlotte Corday in the play of that name, and in "The Lady of Lyons."

After her success with Tree as Miladi in "The Three Musketeers" she appeared at Her Majesty's Theatre in April, 1899, as Olive Arlison in "Carnegie Club." Then, with Kylie Bellew, she appeared at the Comedy as Rosa, in "The Ghetto."

She rejoined Tree at the Haymarket in 1902 to play Calypso in "Ulysses," and in 1904 assumed the management of the Savoy Theatre, opening as Clara in "The Golden Light."

She appeared with Tree at Windsor Castle as Julie de Noirville in "A Man's Shadow," and later toured South Africa and America.

Mrs. Brown-Potter was a friend of King Edward VII, and Queen Alexandra. Her friendship with King Edward was maintained from her earliest days in London until his death in 1910.

Mrs. Brown-Potter was one of the most celebrated beauties of the 'nineties. Her hair was once described as "vivid red-brown, sweeping in a classical curve across her forehead, while the almond-shaped brown eyes, the perfectly formed, slightly aquiline nose and the vivid red lips gave her a somewhat Jewish aspect."

In August, 1912, she announced her intention to leave the stage for the psychic platform, and lectured on occultism once or twice before retiring to the Riviera.

As a young girl she married a wealthy New York merchant many years her senior, but the marriage was not a success, and they soon parted.

GREEK KING APPEALS FOR SUPPORT

Athens, March 2.

In a speech from the Throne at the opening of the Greek Parliament, King George said that Greece enjoyed excellent relations towards the foreign powers, and that her policy would be to faithfully observe existing pacts and treaties, especially the Balkan Pact.

The King concluded by appealing to the patriotism of the Deputies, calling on them to give their wholehearted co-operation, in order that peace and order may be restored throughout the Kingdom.

PROMINENT LAWN TENNIS PLAYERS

Married In St. Giles' Cathedral

London, Feb. 8. Dr. John Buchanan, Fulton, Guisborough, Yorkshire, who has represented Scotland in International lawn tennis, was married yesterday in the Moray Aisle of St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh.

The bride, a prominent Edinburgh lawn tennis player, was Miss Catherine Dorothy Lesley Hunter, younger daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Hunter, 8 Abercromby Place, and a member of Waverley Lawn Tennis Club. The bridegroom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Fulton, Newlands Road, Glasgow. Bride and bridegroom, playing together last year, won the North of Scotland mixed doubles, and two years earlier won the finals of the East of Scotland mixed doubles they have taken part in County week and both are past junior champions of Scotland.

The officiating minister was the Very Rev. Dr. Charles L. Warr, Dean of the Thistle, assisted by the Rev. John Kemp. The bride was given away by her father, and the bridegroom's brother, Mr. William Fulton, was best man.

The bridal gown of white and silver tulle, was made with light orange shirred down the front from neck to waist, scarf collar with ends thrown back over the shoulders, and very wide sleeves caught into tight bands at the wrists. The flared skirt was finished with a train, beyond which flowed the long veil of white tulle. In her hair the bride had a bandeau of the brocade and knots of orange buds, and she carried a bouquet of lily of the valley.

The bridesmaids, Misses Peggy Botting and Nan Fulton, brought a note of spring into church with their dresses of bright turquoise moire and bouquets of daffodils, tulips, and anemones. They had twists of turquoise moire in their hair, and wore bracelets presented by the bridegroom.

After the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Hunter held a reception in the Roxburgh Hotel, after which the bride and bridegroom left for their honeymoon. Mrs. J. B. Fulton wearing a dress of turquoise Angora under a coat of Indian lamb, and brown felt hat.

From the East of Scotland County team the bride received tea-knives as a wedding gift.

LEIPZIG SPRING FAIR

Brisk Business Anticipated

In view of the large number of entries booked by intending exhibitors at the Leipzig Spring Fair of 1936, already affords a fairly accurate forecast of the character and extent of the collections to be displayed, there will be an unusually large participation of manufacturers producing the well-known chainstore articles.

ACCOMMODATION

In expectation of the good turnover confidently looked forward to by all concerned, a large number of central buying firms and the buying departments of some of the biggest European and non-European department stores have rented a large office area for accommodating their chainstore article purchases in the various exhibition buildings during the Leipzig Spring Fair of 1936. The market for chainstore articles at the Fair is chiefly concentrated in the "Dresden Hof," "the Speck Hof," the Zeisig Haus and the Underground Exhibition Hall and the market for stationery, books, and pictures in the "Stenzler Hof" and in the "Grosser Reiter."

Now is the time to visit Australia & New Zealand

lands of Sunshine and Romance. "Down Under" you will feel a new being and even if you are not inclined towards Surfing, Fishing, Shooting or Mountaineering you will find that the Antipodes have plenty to offer you-including 250,000 square miles of land.

On the way down your life aboard will be as you wish, quiet or hectic for the E. & A. will humor your every whim.

And by the way, there is no additional charge for Deck Cabins and there is of course a Sun Deck swimming pool, an Orchestra and a fine Laundry.

A Surgeon and Stewardess are at your disposal and last but not least-we had almost forgotten-the cuisine will set you listening eagerly for the Gong.
